Nazis Hang Eight Hitler Bomb Plotters

BERLIN SAYS "PUNISHMENT" GIVEN GUILTY

Accused Also Reveal Earlier Plot To Kill Hitler by Bomb Blast.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 8—Field Marshal Erwin Von Witzleben and seven other German army officers were hanged today, Berlin announced, after a trial in which they confessed plotting to kill Hitler and surrender Germany to the allies.

This brought to 16 the announced deaths of alleged conspirators in the Berlin-proclaimed plot which culminated in the July 20 bomb explosion at a Hitler headquarters.

Today's executions took place two hours after conclusion of the trial of Von Witzleben and the seven others, all of whom had been expelled previously from the army.

Count York Von Wartenburg, a cousin of Count Claus Von Stauffenburg, named by Berlin as the July 20 assassin, was announced as one of the witnesses. He testified, Berlin said, that the conspirators planned to establish relations with the allies on both the east and west. He said they had no doubt that the enemy would insist on unconditional surrender "and annihilation of the German reich and the German people."

An official account of yesterday's trial, broadcast by DNB, disclosed the alleged plot against Hitler had been hatching since last summer. Col. Count Claus Von Stauffenberg, named by Berlin as the actual assassin, was declared to have brought explosives into Hitler's presence twice before July 20—but to have refrained from letting them go because Henrich Himmler, gestapo chief, was not with Hitler—"he was to be finished at the same time."

Three former generals and four lesser officers were tried with Von Witzleben, who was quoted as testifying that he and Col. Gen. Ludwig Beck were to have headed the military under the coup.

Beck, former chief of the German general staff, committed suicide. Berlin said, after frustration of the conspiracy. Berlin announced earlier the death of seven other accused officers—four by execution July 20 and three more by suicide.

Relates Earlier Plan

Maj. Gen. Stieff, one of those on trial, told the Himmler-ruled people's court, Berlin said, that he knew the details of still another abandoned plot to kill Hitler. This called for the placing of time bombs in the packs of three private soldiers — without their knowledge — and setting the bombs to explode when they appeared before the fuehrer for a demonstration of new equipment.

The broadcast said police officials led the defendants into the Berlin supreme court for the trial. The deliberations were concluded today.

Berlin gave this account:

The officers were accused of participation in the assassination attempt "in order to stir up revolt in Germany, to assume command of the Kehrmacht, to seize state authority and to conclude a dishonorable peace."

The court consisted of an infantry general, a Berlin business man, a people's councilor and a municipal councilor. A Berlin baker and a civil engineer served as substitute judges.

The officers were represented by eight defense councilors appointed by the state.

Denied Right To Salute

When the chief of the defendants, former Field Marshal Erwin Von Witzleben, gave the German salute the president of the court declared, "the German salute may be given only by Germans who are men of honor."

On trial with Witzleben were former Maj. Gen. Erich Hoeppner, former Maj. Gen. Stieff, former Lt. Gen. Von Hase, former Lt. Col. Bernardis, former Capt. Friedrich Karl Klausing, former Lt. Col. Von Hegen and former Lt.

City School Board Approves 19 Teacher Appointments

Leaves Only Four Vacancies To Be Filled; Architect Retained for Proposed Building Program.

The Marion city school board Monday approved 19 teacher appointments recommended by Supt. E. E. Holt, and thus rounded out the city public schools teaching staff for the forthcoming term with the exception of four vacancies.

At a time when many schools are having difficulty filling their staffs, Marion schools appear reasonably assured of a complete staff, board members commented. It is expected that most of the four vacancies still remaining will be filled by the time the school term opens.

Seven Marion residents and 12 persons from outside the city were in the list Supt. Holt submitted yesterday. Included in those appointed are an assistant coach for Harding High school and coaches for Vernon Junior High and Central Junior High schools.

Other board action yesterday included:

Retaining of Thomas D. McLaughlin of Lima as architect to prepare plans for a proposed building program to be submitted to the voters "when the appropriate time arrives."

Approval of the city school budget for 1945.

Acceptance of six resignations.

Approval of one leave of absence.

Approval of a list of building custodians and secretaries.

The 19 names added to the teaching staff by yesterday's board action include the following from Marion: Don D. Zuspan, $2,200, 10 months vocational work; Irene Morgan, $1,305, high school; Mary A. O'Brien, $1,305, elementary; Jeanette Curren, $1,305, high school; Mary Lee Black, $1,395, elementary; Ruth Meredith, $1,305, elementary; Pauline Buchanan, junior high school, salary to be set later.

Those from out of the city on the list are: Evelyn Grindell, Columbus, $1,260, elementary; A. Lee Thrasher, Columbus, $1,845, high school; Margaret E. Findlay, Barnesville, $1,800, girls' physical education; Betty Gene Windland, Sharon Center, $1,750, junior high music; Elizabeth Edgar, Wauseon, $1,900, elementary music supervisor; Howard P. Wisehart, Frankfort, $2,000, 10 months printing and junior high; Helen Pennell, Washingtonville, $1,485, elementary; Waldon D. Shackelford, Spencerville, $2,200, coach and science at Central Junior High; Larry Nicholson, Byesville, $2,150, coach and industrial arts at Vernon Junior High; Roger Rossi, Springfield, $2,100, physical education and assistant coach at Harding High; Emily Louise Wilson, Westerville, $1,360, librarian at Edison Junior High; Hazel Keller Struble, Columbus, $1,845, Edison Junior High.

Hundreds Needed To Fill Next Week's Blood Donor Quota

More and more volunteers—several hundred of them, in fact—are needed and needed immediately, if Marion county meets its quota of 1,000 blood donors to fill the schedule for the five-day visit of the Red Cross Blood Donor unit here next Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Miss Esther Guthery, registration chairman, reported at a meeting of the Red Cross Blood Donor committee yesterday at Hotel Harding. Next week marks the ninth visit of the unit to Marion and the first time the unit has set up a five-day service here.

Registrations are being received each day, Miss Guthery reported, and a large number of employes of the city's industrial plants have registered for the various days, but still more are needed if the full quota of 200 each day is reached, the figures show.

First 5-Day Visit

The Red Cross is anxious that each and every visit of the unit here be a success, and the citizens have responded generously to all appeals, F. F. McKinney, chairman of the blood donor committee stated in discussing the forthcoming visit of the unit, "but we are more than anxious that this, the first five-day visit find us ready with our full quota for each day and the entire week."

On D-Day, it was pointed out, donors poured into every center and every mobile unit operating from coast to coast, but the response since that time has been considerably lacking in not a few spots, "but," the committee adds, "every day is D-Day for Blood donors."

Already the toll of wounded from Saipan is coming back to American hospitals. There were 11,000 wounded in that action with only 2,000 deaths, and observers say that the deaths would have been much higher, except for the plentiful supply of plasma which saved thousands of lives among the gallant Marines, reports show. The same story comes from the actions in France, as the Ameri-

GERMANS FACE NEW DANGER ON POLISH FRONT

Communication Between Krakow and Warsaw Threatened by Red Advance.

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Aug. 8—A new eruption of Red army attacks which captured more than 60 communities beyond the enemy's broken Vistula river defenses threatened today to strangle German communications between Krakow and Warsaw in the heart of Poland.

Striking out afresh yesterday from the Vistula bridgehead Marshal Ivan S. Konev's first Ukraine army reached points 30 miles west of the river, Soviet field dispatches said.

Thrusting beyond newly-occupied Szydlow, the Russians directly menanced Kielce, astride highway and rail arteries 25 miles to the northwest. The direction of the drive raised the possibility the Red army troops might outflank Krakow on the north.

37 Miles From Krakow

Last reports placed Soviet spearheads within 37 miles of Krakow, last big Nazi bastion before Silesia, now 75 to 90 miles away.

Moscow's guns sounded last night for twin victories—the fall of the oil center of Boryslaw in the Carpathians, and the capture of Sambor, communications hub whose fall gave the Russians a grip on five routes leading into nearby Czechoslovakia.

(Information available in London indicated that through capture of Boryslaw the Russians had regained some 2,000 Galician oil wells which had been feeding the Nazi war machine. The Germans thus were left only the Polesti fields in Romania, which have been repeatedly bombed by allied airmen.)

Far to the north three powerful Soviet armies began a pincers movement on German East Prussia on a 200-mile front. One of these—Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's first Baltic army—bent back sagging German defenses in Lithuania in twin drives toward Memel and Tilsit, key East Prussian cities. His troops captured 50 towns and villages, including Saukenai, 77 miles east of the Baltic port of Memel.

Bagramian's troops, who last week plunged to the Baltic coast below Riga, advanced as much

JAP PREMIER WARNS PEOPLE

Homefolk Also Told of Countermoves on Grand and Bold Scale.

By The Associated Press

With New Guinea lost and a third Marianas island, Guam, about to fall, Japan's 100 millions were on notice today that their empire confronts "national difficulties of unprecedented seriousness," and that Japanese countermoves "on a grand and bold scale are expectantly awaited."

Premier Gen. Kuniaki Koiso, said a Tokyo broadcast, told his people the Americans "have encroached upon the Marianas in an attempt to obtain a quick decision in the war and, by present appearances, as if to strike at our homeland in a single blow."

In one of the rare Japanese references to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's southwest Pacific domain, Koiso added: "in the New Guinea area, too, they have made gradual advances and have revealed their plan to threaten our lines of communication with the southern region." He called on the people to arm.

Guam Noose Tightens

American Marines and soldiers on Guam have compressed several thousand squirming Japanese into the northern one-tenth of the island, bringing complete reconquest of the former U. S. naval base very near today.

Other bad tidings for the enemy:

Apparent neutralization of Yap island, once-mighty Japanese airbase in the Carolines 600 miles southwest of Guam.

Slicing of the Japanese supply line between Aitape and Wewak in British New Guinea.

Reports — Tokyo - originated— of American airplanes over the Philippines on Monday (U. S. time).

The Tokyo radio said a large plane dropped "three small bombs harmlessly into the sea" near Davao, Mindanao, at 1 a. m. An hour later another plane "fled before reaching Davao."

There were no substantiating reports from Lt. Gen. George C. Kenney's Far Eastern air force, which patrols from the Australia-New Guinea area toward the Philippines. There has been no allied air attack upon the Philippines since mid-April, 1942, before the fall of Corregidor.

Japs Admit Bonin Raid

The Japanese belatedly acknowledged a two-day raid by an American carrier task force upon the Bonin and Kazan islands, 1,000 miles north of Guam and only about 600 miles from Tokyo, but said 41 U. S. planes were shot

Pfc. McEldowney's Wounds Not Serious

Mrs. Hazel Houser of North State street received a letter yesterday from her son, Private First Class Paul McEldowney, stating that the wounds he received in action in France are only slight and that he is getting along all right. He is in a convalescent hospital in France. His wife, Mrs. Ruth McEldowney of Asbury Park, N. J., received a telegram Saturday from the war department informing her of his being wounded. A detailed story appeared in The Star on Friday when Mrs. Houser received a letter from her son accompanying the Purple Heart he was awarded for his wounds.

AMERICAN TROOPS NEAR BREST, ATTACK LORIENT SUB BASE

By The Associated Press

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 8—Allied troops advancing in two powerful surges at the wings of a 130-mile front drove today to a little more than 100 miles of Paris, and the Germans desperately rushed in forces from southern France.

Canadian troops hammered four miles into the main enemy line below Caen, and Americans on the southern flank struck toward Le Mans, 110 miles from the French capital. Advance elements already were reported in Le Mans, a road-and-rail hub.

The doughboy drive left behind to the northwest the wreckage of the Germans' abortive but still-writhing counterattack in the Mortain area.

The exact sector where the allies were little more than 100 miles from Paris was not specified. A report that allied forces had definitely passed the 100-mile mark circulated late today, but proved erroneous.

At the northern end of the allied front, the Germans' stout Caen hinge, loosened by an unprecedented 1,000-plane bombardment last night, was battered again in daylight by 600 U. S. heavy bombers.

Canadian-British troops stormed over the Orne river in a four-mile advance. They punched through a once-impregnable anti-tank screen, seizing strongpoint villages by the dozen.

On the Breton peninsula, U. S. troops battled for the northern port of St. Malo, fought on the outskirts of Brest, and threw a concentrated attack against Lorient.

(Berlin radio acknowledged Americans had broken into St. Malo at one point.)

It was the 26th anniversary of the Germans' "blackest day" of World War One when the German high command decided the war was lost.

163 Tanks Knocked Out

Their counterattack in the center of the allied line had been halted and thrown back, with planes alone knocking out 163 enemy tanks.

Gathemo, seven miles southwest of Vire, has been captured. Very stubborn German resistance continued at St. Malo, the by-passed and besieged Brittany port.

Bitter fighting continued in the Mortain area where survivors of four German tank divisions counterattacked yesterday in an attempt to reach Avranches and split the allied armies in France.

The Canadian-American drives edged forward at both ends of a curving 100-mile front, while in the center other U. S. forces had smashed a powerful German steel counterthrust with planes knocking out 163 enemy tanks.

Battles still swirled in this middle sector where four German armored divisions—mounting the fiercest counterassault since June 6—sought to crush through the allied corridor joining Normandy and Brittany. The town of Mortain, swept up in the assault, was recaptured by doughboys.

Captured Nazi Officer Says Himmler Dead

By ROGER D. GREENE
AP War Correspondent

ON THE BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, Aug. 8—A newly captured German intelligence officer asserted today that Heinrich Himmler, German gestapo and SS chief, has been assassinated and that Reichsmarshal Herman Goering was wounded in a new outbreak against the Nazi heirarchy.

(There was no confirmation of this report. The officer's report was based on second-hand information and therefore is subject to reservation. In this connection, the British radio said today a German lieutenant taken prisoner in France related he had given a "pep talk" to his troops and "for want of other good news" had told them that Himmler was dead).

Nine other captives, all Austrians, declared they could corroborate the assertion of the intelligence officer.

"We heard that (Marshal Erwin) Rommel was wounded in the head by bomb fragments on the Normandy front, but was recovering," one of the Austrians

Lancaster Bombers Cut Path for Canadian Advance Below Caen.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 8—Flying in close support of ground forces during darkness for the first time, 1,000 British four-engined Lancaster bombers blasted German positions below Caen last night blazing a trail for the Canadian first army's smashing new attack.

In the hour before midnight, the big bombers dumped an estimated 6,700 tons of explosives on enemy fortified points in the area of May-Sur-Orne and Tilly La Campagne on both sides of the Caen-Falaise road.

Allied air fleets made new attacks on the enemy today.

The midnight bombardment formed one of three separate phases in aerial support given Gen. Eisenhower's advancing armies.

The other two phases, in which

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

"PLEASANT beast!" the FBI man commented, as I was scanning the note from the Nazi leader and impressing it on my memory.

"But not especially dangerous," my father added. "Like so many of them, his overweening egotism makes him a sitting duck mark. He has gone away, sure that he has escaped our trailers, and with no suspicion that your man Arnold, is on his trail. Well, we can let him run the length of his rope. Our job is to see that his stalker behind us, does not get a chance to trail us. Have you finished memorizing that thing, Margaret?"

Memorized

"Yes, I have," I answered, feeling that every word of the threatening screed was graven on my brain.

"Then if you'll hand it back to 'Mr. K.' for safe keeping, we'll get on with the present job," he said.

I handed over the telegraph blank which held the scribbled note. "Mr. K." placed it in his wallet and turned back to my father with the deferential attention Stebbins and I were giving the "Chief."

"Mr. K.," he began, "I'm going to turn over to you the difficult job of keeping the spy from finding out what the rest of us are doing. I see he has drifted around again to a position where he is facing me, although it is doing him no good. But do not make any move in his direction until I give the signal."

"Check!" the FBI man said, and my father turned to Stebbins.

New Instructions

"Our car, with Miller driving, is parked on the Thirty-third side," he said. "Tell Miller to get over as near the Eighth Avenue entrance, but on the postoffice side, as soon as he can. Then he'll be headed downtown. I'll give him directions when I get there. As soon as you've seen just where he's parked, come back here to us.

"No, don't go yet," he went on hurriedly, as Stebbins started to turn away. "I'll give you the signal when I'm ready. Now, 'Mr. K., when Stebbins starts, I want you to keep your eyes fixed on the spy. If he has some one helping him, which I doubt, he will make some signal, and we will have to find out who the other man is. It will be your job, Stebbins, to elude him and get to Miller without his knowledge. Can you do that?"

"Easy!" Stebbins replied, and it was not braggadocio, but quiet self confidence that showed in his face and voice. "This place is a regular rabbit warren, and I know all the trails. Besides, I have a lot of pals around here who will help stall him."

"Good!" my father approved. "Now, if this man has no helper, it is a certainty that he will let you alone, Stebbins, and concentrate on us. It is my daughter he wishes to trail. So when you come back, if he is still here, you will guide us through one or two of the warrens which will let us out the Eighth avenue door without too much delay, while Mr. 'K.' here, delays the spy in his own fashion. I give you carte blanche, Mr. 'K.'" He broke off suddenly, turning to the FBI man

"Mr. K." Replies

"I hope I shall justify your confidence, sir," "Mr. K." rejoined.

"Then that is all," my father said, "except to tell you to make your way back to the hideaway as soon as you can."

But the F. B. I. man spoke with quick insistance.

"Aren't you going to have any one with you and your daughter?" he queried, and I was sure that he had meant to say "any young, strong man."

My father's brows drew together involuntarily, then cleared again.

"Stebbins will go with us to the Eighth Avenue entrance," he said, and the car will be right across the street. There will be a driver and a guard in the car."

"Please do not think me insistent," "Mr. K." said, "but will it interfere with your plan for Stebbins to cross the street with you and see you into your car? I shall feel a great deal better if you will let him do that."

My father frowned slightly again, then smiled.

Not Necessary

"I'm sure it isn't necessary," he said "I still am able to use a small revolver and I do not anticipate any trouble. But if it eases your conscience, Stebbins may not only put us into the car but he may go with us."

"Thank you, sir. Then I suppose you wish me to watch the spy now?"

"Yes, I do," my father said. "Ready, Stebbins, start for your rabbit-warrens!"

Stebbins turned without a word toward the interior of the station, in an exactly opposite direction to the door I knew he meant later to use.

But we were paying no attention to him. My eyes as well as my father's were fixed, with those of "Mr. K.," upon the spy who had been watching us. But the man made no move to follow Stebbins, nor did he make any signal that we could detect.

"I'm sure he's alone on this job, sir," "Mr. K." said after a few seconds.

"Then," my father said, with a relieved sigh, "we can relax for a few minutes until Stebbins gets back."

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Leg Muscle Cramps

PAINFUL cramping of the muscles of the legs occur to all kinds and ages of people under all sorts of conditions.

Middle aged and elderly people experience them while walking. The cramps compel the individual to sit down and rest. After a short time the cramp, or rather the pain, for it may exist without actual muscular spasm, goes away and the walk can be continued. This condition is called intermittent limping, or claudication, and is closely analogous to heart pang or angina pectoris.

It is almost certainly due to shutting off of the blood supply to the muscles, the result of the hardened, inelastic and narrowed arteries in the latter periods of life. The exertion of walking makes the muscles demand more oxygen and more blood, and this demand the narrowed arteries cannot meet. With the period of rest the muscles get enough oxygen so that they stop grumbling, and the walking can be resumed until the blood supply proves inadequate again. About the only effective treatment is to cut down walking to absolute necessities.

But there are many other kinds of leg cramps. One kind, far from being brought on by exertion, comes on at night in bed, and are not limited to the middle and old age group. They occur quite frequently to women in the second half of pregnancy, but also to young men and women of any status.

Of course swimmer's cramps is still another sort in that it occurs to young people, but under quite violent exertion. These are probably essentially, so far as cause is concerned, quite similar to the old age group of intermittent limpers, in that the exertion of swimming demands just more oxygen than the swimmer's heart and lungs can supply, even if the arteries are young, thin and elastic.

To explain the night cramps of the young while in bed however has taxed the resources of the physiologists. Not that a great deal of research has not been done on the subject. One would suppose, for instance, that since heat improves the circulation the warmth of the bed and bed clothes would keep the muscles from cramping, but Bowers, in the Military Surgeon Journal, showed that with some of these cases the warmth increases the metabolic needs of the muscle, whereas cold decreases the metabolic level. So perhaps kicking the bed clothes off will relieve ome of these cramps, though this is a poor time of year to bring that up.

At a rate these young people's nocturnal leg cramps while in bed do not mean any special disease condition. They pass and the outlook is good, hardly any treatment except massage and foot exercises being required.

The basis of all muscular cramps (except writer's cramp which is another thing again and probably due to nervous disorder) is lack of circulation to the part, but the trigger that sets them off is some disturbance of nutrition in the muscle. Muscles require a somewhat complicated set of menus for their proper function and one of the chemicals they need is calcium. It is possible that the diet of the muscle-cramper is deficient in calcium. A group of physiologists studying such people reported that they admit they consumed almost no milk, which is the best source of calcium for our diet. This is a plain hint towards treatment for relief. But, as I said in the beginning, most of our explanations for cramps are very theoretic.

but Bowers, in the Military Surgeon Journal, showed that with some of these cases the warmth increases the metabolic needs of the muscle, whereas cold decreases the metabolic level. So perhaps kicking the bed clothes off will relieve ome of these cramps, though this is a poor time of year to bring that up.

At a rate these young people's nocturnal leg cramps while in bed do not mean any special disease condition. They pass and the outlook is good, hardly any treatment except massage and foot exercises being required.

The basis of all muscular cramps (except writer's cramp which is another thing again and probably due to nervous disorder) is lack of circulation to the part, but the trigger that sets them off is some disturbance of nutrition in the muscle. Muscles require a somewhat complicated set of menus for their proper function and one of the chemicals they need is calcium. It is possible that the diet of the muscle-cramper is deficient in calcium. A group of physiologists studying such people reported that they admit they consumed almost no milk, which is the best source of calcium for our diet. This is a plain hint towards treatment for relief. But, as I said in the beginning, most of our explanations for cramps are very theoretic.

Marion County Ration Board Issues Call for Volunteers

Processing of Gasoline Applications Faces Delays Unless Help Is Obtained, Officials Say.

The Marion County Rationing Board facing a growing volume of work at a time when its budget for clerical help is being reduced, today issued a call for volunteer helpers to assist in the orderly handling of the program in Marion county.

The shortage of help has become gradually more serious in recent weeks and is now at the point where B and C gasoline book renewals may be delayed unless volunteer help can be obtained for a few hours each afternoon.

Also, the renewal of gasoline A rations will start Aug. 15, and this will require the equivalent of the work of 15 persons six hours a day for a period of three weeks, Edgar W. Barnhart, chairman of the Marion County Rationing Board, said.

He estimated that in addition to the workers to handle A rations, the equivalent of two persons working three hours each afternoon five days a week would be needed to continue the ordinary handling of B and C rations which are processed on a continuous basis with applications for renewals coming in daily.

In issuing the appeal for volunteers, Mr. Barnhart emphasized that women who donate their services will not be the only persons serving in the OPA program on a voluntary basis. "There are about 25 persons on the various panels who give time regularly and who get no compensation, as compared with about 14 clerical workers, who are being overloaded as a result of the mounting volume of work," he said.

He added that the volunteers will be asked to do only desk work that can be handled without special training. The volunteers will not be obliged to do counter work, but will devote their time to processing applications.

Volunteers may arrange to furnish help by calling C. C. Holliday, executive secretary of the ration board, at his office on the second flood of the building at the southeast corner of State and Center streets, telephones 2133 and 6151.

Rare Illness Makes Death Certain for Ohio Boy

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 8—Jackie Krumpolts, 4, doesn't seem sick as he chatters in the children's ward of Springfield City hospital.

Yet he will die unless a recovered victim of lymphatic leukemia, rare and deadly blood disease, is found, physicians said. They added there are no known survivors.

Jackie's father, Arthur Krumpolts, an aunt and three other relatives furnished blood for the transfusions that have kept him alive since July 25 when he was hospitalized with the disease.

The number of transfusions will be increased as he gets weaker and will be useless in saving his life unless one of them is blood from a recovered victim, physicians said.

He Makes The Miracles...

He doesn't have time to think about being a hero . . .

He's too busy winning the war.

When a landing is made, he often leads the way. When a river is crossed, he is among the first to go over. When a town or a pillbox is tough to crack, he moves in and cracks it wide open.

He's the guy they call on for miracles . . . and he makes 'em in his stride.

He's G. I. Joe . . . the doughboy . . . the mud-slogging Infantryman. He's doing one of the biggest jobs in the war . . . and it gets bigger every day.

Our job over here . . . the job of backing him up . . . is growing bigger and tougher, too . . . as we speed more men, more guns, more fighting equipment on the way to the front lines.

Last year, the nation's railroads hauled more passengers and freight than at any time in history. And this year, in spite of manpower shortages, they are carrying even more.

That's why we ask you—when you use the New York Central or any railroad—to remember that railway space is more vital today than it has ever been before . . . and that every inch must carry its full wartime load.

For only by even greater cooperation and understanding, on the part of shippers and receivers of freight and the traveling public, can we get the things done over here that help the doughboy make his "miracles" over there.

CONG. SMITH IS LIONS SPEAKER

Hits Provisions of Monetary Proposal, Calling It Financial Dictatorship.

Charging leading government financial men with attempting to set up an international monetary and financial dictatorship, Cong. Frederic C. Smith discussed "The Keynes-Morgenthau Scheme—What Is It? Where Did It Originate?" when he spoke to members of the Lions club Monday noon at Hotel Harding.

Stating that he had been overruled in attempting to make a congressional committee hearing on the plan public, since the plan is supposed to deal with post-war economy, Rep. Smith also criticized the government for not allowing him as an observer to attend the recent Bretton Woods Monetary conference. He said that the state department had informed him that there would be no rooms available for him if he intended to look in on the conference.

In regards to what he called the "Keynes-Morgenthau scheme," Rep. Smith explained that when a plan regarding the setting up of an international financial arrangement which had been set forth by Lord John M. Keynes, economist and advisor to the British Exchequer, was made public, Henry Morgenthau, secretary of the treasury, stated that he had been "scooped."

Calls Keynes Author

Later plans made public by Mr. Morgenthau were really nothing more than a version of the Keynes proposal for an international clearing union, according to Rep. Smith. He stated that the original proposal was entirely of foreign origin and had been issued in the form of a British white paper.

Rep. Smith charged that the plan deals not with an American problem, but with a British problem. The difficulty with Britain's monetary systems lies in her large debts in her colonies and to foreign countries, he explained, and further stated that Britain had in mind to get the United States to underwrite all British debt here in negotiations for an international monetary scheme.

Criticizing monetary and financial experts for putting their proposals into puzzling language, Rep. Smith charged that "they cannot be understood by laymen."

He continued, "There is no doubt in my mind that Lord Keynes prompted every word in it." (Morgenthau's second draft of a plan for international stabilization).

"The scheme as finally worked out at the Bretton Woods conference would do the following things," he stated. "The United States would hand over to an international body the power to regulate the value of our own domestic currency. This power is vested by the Constitution in congress... the forces back of this movement hope to induce congress to ignore the Constitution and do their will."

Debt Repudiation Cited

Another provision included in the scheme would allow the outright repudiation of international debts, according to Rep. Smith.

He further charged that the power to fix the price of gold would be handed over to an international body, thus giving other nations the power to fix the standard of wages in this country. The monetary plan would also give an international group the power to repudiate international debts, he stated.

In conclusion Rep. Smith stated, "The scheme proposes nothing less than the setting up of an international monetary and financial dictatorship. It would be run entirely by politicians. Voluntary cooperation between private enterprises in the United States and other countries would be abolished." He assailed the proposal as "making for the complete destruction of what is now left of private enterprise, not only in the rest of the world, but in the United States as well."

Plans were completed for the Lions-Rotary-Kiwanis golf match to be held at the Country Club Sunday, Lt. George Miedertz, a former member of the club, was a guest.

CAMP VAN DORN, Miss.—Six soldiers of the 255th Infantry communications section here have living proof that they mastered their GI courses in first aid. The women who wouldn't sit and wait

IT ISN'T EASY to say "good-by" to the family, and to friends, and to nice long week ends.

It may not be natural for a woman to salute and stand at attention and say "Yes, sir"...

But ask any Wac if she'd change places with anyone in the world—and the answer would be "No!"

For deep down inside, every Wac knows the enormous satisfaction of being truly useful at a time of critical need.

The Wac spirit is a gallant spirit. The spirit of women who would rather be in the war, than sitting and waiting for it to end.

The Wac pride is an honest pride. In a job well done. In being part of the Army of the U. S.

You really have to hand it to the women of the WAC....

For they symbolize everything that is America.

2 MILLION WORKERS FACE U. S. JOB LOSS

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—Dropping of 2,000,000 civilians from the federal payroll within a year after the war ends was foreseen today by Chairman Ramspeck (D-Ga.) of the house civil service committee.

Ramspeck's prediction was made in connection with the announcement by the civil service commission yesterday of the order that employes will be discharged as reductions become necessary.

The Georgian said the civilian rolls now number 2,906,912. He estimated that postwar cuts would bring the total down to about 900,000. The 2,000,000 federal employes in Washington, he believes will be cut in half.

He expressed the opinion that government workers should be "mustered-out" of war jobs under the same severance pay and unemployment insurance benefits as the government provides for workers in war plants.

The "layoff" regulations issued by the commission stressed the rights of "career" employes and war veterans as well as efficiency and length of service. Federal workers were asked by the commission to stay on their jobs as long as needed and it explained they will get due notice of any impending reductions.

The commission emphasized that its action does not mean demobilization of these workers is imminent but is based on uniform application of civil service rules throughout the government and conformity with the veterans' preference act of 1944. Personnel reductions may be caused by future decreases in appropriations, completion of projects and reorganization of agencies.

Of the 2,908,912 federal workers, fewer than 500,000 now are on jobs not directly connected with the War or Navy departments, emergency war agencies or the post office department. A breakdown prepared in May showed 1,193,641 civilian workers in the war department, 652,470 in the navy department, [illegible] agencies, 848,076 [illegible] post office department and [illegible] in all other government departments and agencies.

Enemy Agents

PHILADELPHIA'S transportation strike, which has been accomplished by a spate of official and unofficial speculation about the part being played in it by enemy agents, suggests that we have vastly more to fear from it's own citizens in matters of this kind than from alien conspirators.

The prejudice, misunderstanding, misinformation and lack of discipline have made the ground for whatever seeds of dissension may have been sown in the United States by professional subversionists. A country may be free from enemy agents, yet still contain within itself the possibilities of greater trouble than enemy agents could hope to foment.

Philadelphia's troubles, like those in Detroit last year, represent a showdown in America between those who understand the principles of the institution they live under and those who neither understand nor agree with those principles. Civil insurrection in wartime, wherever it occurs, is a challenge to the forces of unity upon which the nation's hope of survival.

Perhaps it may be proved that the enemy had something to do with Philadelphia's violent conduct of the last few days, but without the eager assistance of Philadelphians, themselves, it couldn't have happened. Fortunately, the tiny minority which always causes the trouble has tipped its hand, which should make it easy for Philadelphians who resent the black eye given their city to place the blame.

Who Are the Germans?

THERE is frank astonishment on the part of war correspondents and the United States fighting men they quote in their despatches because the Germans captured in France and Italy do not all behave like Nazis—and because so many of them are not Germans at all, but foreigners pressed into military service. This does not square with the usual impression of the German army.

The revelation should be helpful not only to American fighting men, but civilians. In World War I, Kaiser Wilhelm and the Junkers were the German prototypes. In this war, the prototypes were the bull-necked, hard-faced Nazis who posed for pictures during the Polish and French invasions—physical specimens whose making was done for them by the plotting Hitler and his National Socialist counsellors.

The Germans were never the Junkers, and while the Junkers are being "put on the spot" by the Nazis, the Germans are not the Junkers either. They are, in a military sense, all people on the other side. Prime Minister Churchill is being whiplashed by critics for pointing out a few days ago that the war grows more biological as it wears on to its conclusion, and put his finger on an evident truth. A conscript fighting in a German uniform may be called an ideological enemy, but the machine guns fires are just as deadly as the bullets of a Nazi fanatic. Likewise, death dealt by an Austrian farm boy who is fighting only because of loyalty to Germany, right or wrong, is as permanent as that dealt by a professional Nazi. The Germans are the people on the other side, and they are of all kinds, a fact that is realized by United States fighting men and civilians comprehend it.

Voting Fundamentals

...from extraneous issues and added notions, CIO's chief political significance in 1944 is its use of the standard vote-getting technique of the two major parties. To that it has made and will make itself felt by getting voters registered and then getting them to the polls when it is time to vote. CIO has gone back to the fundamentals of party and Democratic organization.

News Behind the News

Future Security Believed To Rest in Ingenuity Rather Than Weapons or Pacts.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Terrific pressure of new weapons of destruction upon the world has not changed the fundamentals of war.

The great bombers now seen developing over Germany cannot prevent good soldiers from marching on to victory on the ground, as proved on New York. The bombs supplement the use of warfare are supposed to have come true.

By their use other new implements, many of which we ourselves have already developed through necessity, the people have come to realize that weapons of the future will spread greater destruction. Single explosions will incessantly kill more and more thousands of persons.

The average run of comment holds, therefore, that we must rely heavily on our Navy and our air force in the post-war period.

We have a Navy now reported at nearly 6 to 1 over Britain, and in many ships in the Pacific, it may prove of profit to assign them all an effective part to do. As one naval authority has told me:

"We have so many ships we do not know what to do with them."

The American air force also will come out of this war the greatest in the world. Our Army, they say, never again will be allowed to deteriorate as it has in the past.

Fooling Ourselves?

Thus we are preparing in the future to maintain our lives in permanent peace. It seems to me that, in this instance again, we are fooling ourselves.

No weapon, no new device of destruction, ever assured security to a nation. The French built a Maginot line, which was impregnable to them. The ancient Chinese built the wall of China which to them was the same thing to their people.

Are we not today being just as short-sighted in our thinking on defense and our preparations for our future security, as were the French, the ancient Chinese, and, in fact, all defenses of every nation in the history of the world?

What is security, if it is not walls, navies, planes, armies? What can make a people secure?

Ingenuity Called the Answer

Only their own ingenuity, in my opinion. Only in the mind of man can be find the stones for impregnable fortifications. Only by constant alertness and wise leadership can he provide for his safety.

Wisdom, in my opinion, is more important today than navies, planes and armies, because what good are these if they are not put to superior use.

To be static is to be weak, no matter what the size of the defending force. The minds of the generals of France, like their people, were confident in their security and, therefore, unalert to their danger. They had the best wall ever built up to that time.

We will have the best defending force. But it will be useless unless the psychological attitude of our leaders and our people changes. There must be a new doctrine of realism propounded. It must say:

"You are never secure. There is no security in the very nature of things. There never has been. There never will be. That nation maintains itself longest which is alert, wise, and therefore, realistic."

Answers for Weapons

So also with weapons. There never was a weapon made in the history of the world for which there was no adequate or superior answer. These robots might spread greater destruction than shells, and they may grow larger and larger, but an answer will be found for them.

The only lesson of science in this war is that methods of destruction are rapidly now amplifying their field of operations. Is the answer not then plain?

Ships, planes and guns we may need aplenty. Pacts, divisions of territory, splitting of Europe into small separate parts may be devised.

But what good are any or all of these things if they are not wisely conceived on a basis of realism, and constantly, alertly administered.

Politics may be shrewd and develop high sounding palliatives. Warriors may devise greater and greater defenses and weapons. But what we need is wisdom and ceaseless alertness—something for which we do not seem to be searching very hard.

No Trespassing!

U. S. Now Prepared To Enforce Monroe Doctrine.

THE long struggle to keep the new world from being an annex for Europe's ambitions and hatreds has reached a fresh climax in strained relations between the United States and Argentina.

The struggle began generations ago. By location, language, culture, business connections and sympathy, South America is closer to Europe than to North America. It has been regarded by Europeans as a sort of special prize — since long before the United States became aware of its importance to the security of this hemisphere.

Germans, Italians, Spaniards and the British have competed for its riches and esteem, usually at the expense of the United States, often slow to understand the kind of game it was playing, frequently awkward in its moves.

While Europeans and even Japanese were working systematically to advance their interests, the United States was following a hit-and-miss plan under a false sense of security created by the century-old Monroe Doctrine.

In effect, what is happening today is happening because the Monroe Doctrine has been challenged. The United States fears Germany may move its Fascism to South America lock, stock and barrel, unless the original purpose of the doctrine is revived.

This time it is not the Holy Alliance which seeks to extend influence into this hemisphere, but an unholy alliance of Germany and Japan. But this time, there is another difference, too. The United States is no longer a weak, experimental republic, depending heavily on Great Britain, as it was a century ago.

When President Monroe told the European powers in 1823 that the American continents no longer were to be considered as subjects for future colonization and that any attempt to extend their systems to any portion of this hemisphere would be viewed with alarm, his words carried real weight, because Great Britain was ready to back them up. It is not clear where Britain may choose to stand now that the danger has reappeared, in modern form, but with or without Britain the United States can back up its words.

LATIN AMERICA did not like everything about the Monroe Doctrine in 1823 and also has misgivings in 1944. Fumbling, ineptitude and downright insincerity in its application during the 19th century and part of the present century gave many Latin Americans more reason to resent the encroachment of the United States than that of European powers.

Yet, as foreign policies go, the doctrine was well founded and reasonably well administered. After more than a century of continuous, if not always intelligent, application, it has reached a climax in the "good neighbor" plan.

Insofar as foreign policy reflects the attitudes of the people behind governments — which it must do if it is to be sound and continuous — the United States seeks nothing in Latin America but the conditions of mutual security and prosperity. Only Argentina openly questions this country's intentions toward Latin America.

By circumstances, rather than conviction, the United States has been forced to abandon insistence on representative government as a pre-requisite for good relations. There are many shades of republicanism among the Latin American republics — none of them identical with the shade familiar in this country and most of them resembling dictatorship.

The kind of government has become less important than the effect of government. As long as there is no armed aggression—no strong challenge to hemispheric security — public opinion in the United States will be tolerant. It will cease to be tolerant, as the state department already has ceased to be tolerant whenever a Latin American government for any reason whatever threatens to violate the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine.

Argentina has led dissent and resistance to the good neighbor plan but it is significant that Argentina has been stranded by diplomatic events as a minority of one among the Latin American republics.

THE danger looming in Argentina needs to be realized and talked about openly. Argentina as a single nation susceptible to foreign influences hostile to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine is not of momentous importance. But Argentina as a possible refuge for German Nazis scuttling out of Europe to find refuge in a friendly atmosphere in the New World is of extreme importance.

Not only would the migrant Nazis be enabled to preserve their identity for the doing of further mischief, but their influence over Argentina inevitably would encourage the growth of militant nationalism in that country. Argentinians, in that event, would be cast in the same role as that of the Italians who threw in their lot with the Germans under the puppet leadership of Mussolini—and discovered too late that the Germans were doing all the leading.

Great Britain, with its vast commercial stake in Argentina, can no more permit that possibility to materialize than can the United States. While the British may exert through investment and commerce an influence even greater than that of Germany on Argentina as a whole, they have not sought to exert it on a straight political basis, as the Germans have.

Other South American countries may waver later, but so far it is Argentina alone which has been hostile to the United States, the Allies and the United Nations. Argentina alone has discouraged the hope that when the wars in Europe and Asia have been won there may be no out-cropping of the same infections in the new world.

Daily Bible Thought

Better seek wisdom and follow it: "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding, shall rest in the assembly of the dead." —Proverbs 21:16.

THE MAD RUSH-IN

Clean-Up Squads

WHO cleans up the mess left by battling armies? In this war, the mess is cleaned up by two efficient, well-planned, far-sighted outfits who make mess-cleaning their business.

They are the AMG and ACC (Allied Military Government and Allied Control Commission). These are the organizations which ride with the first wave of invasion to take over local governments, restore order and control foreign civilians so combat troops may advance unhindered.

Nation's Business reports that they go in with the fighters, taking food, money, stamps and proclamations. Like the money and stamps, the proclamations are printed in advance.

Announce the occupation, specify what offenses are crimes, establish allied military courts, fix rates of exchange for the new currency, declare a moratorium and close the banks, annul previous laws against Allies and races, appoint custodians for enemy and alien property, fix a sunset-to-sunrise curfew and confiscate weapons and radio transmitters.

The Allied officers seek responsible persons among the civilians — the mayor or deputy mayor, the chief of police, the fire chief, a priest, a doctor, and these are put in charge of other civilian groups, to put out fires, administer to the injured, bury the dead — and later carry on the business of reestablishing the community as a going concern.

Communications are restored, utilities repaired, transportation maintained and medical service organized.

Millions of civilians must be given work to feed and clothe themselves, supplies must be brought in, little shops must open with goods on their shelves, wheels must turn again in mills and factories, wreckage must be cleared away and rebuilt, sanitation and health must be cared for, and while providing these material needs, a new and radically different form of government must be set up, economic structures from finance to production and labor reformed on democratic lines and the lives and ideas of the people turned toward a brighter future.

Rennes

In Brittany all roads lead to Rennes, the railway, highway, and inland waterway junction in northwest France reached by United States forces.

The city is a funnel for nearly all surface traffic to and from the large Brittany Peninsula with its important port of Brest. Nazis caught behind the American thrust to Rennes have only one railroad and one major road—both following the south coast—on which to escape.

With its more than 98,000 peacetime inhabitants, Rennes is by far the largest city in France yet reached by the Allies, says National Geographic society. Its present-day importance, in peace or war, is as a transportation center, but 1,000 years ago it was the capital of Brittany, then an independent dukedom like Normandy. For centuries after the freedom-loving Bretons accepted French rule, Rennes was the defender and champion of their minority rights.

A great fire that raged for seven days in 1720 destroyed nearly every vestige of the great medieval capital city. Rennes was rebuilt in dark granite on a simple, geometric plan that spoiled its individuality. Its great museums, university, cathedral, lyceum, and academies are not the exciting architectural monuments found in other French provincial capitals.

Modern Rennes is built on both sides of the Vilaine river, connected by canal with the Rance to form a cross-peninsula waterway.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Last Will and Testament of a Dog

"A 14-year-old dog died here, leaving an estate of $30,000. The money had been left to it by its owner and will now go for the care of other dogs."—Wisconsin news item.

BEING of sound mind as dogs go, which is sounder than some humans, I hereby declare this to be my last will and testament. I name no trustees or executors, as a dog has much faith and confidence in the honesty and good will of the human race to consider any special provisions of this nature necessary. I distrust nobody. I am not beset by suspicions.

I hope no lawyers will be required. I have only a dog's intellect but I am smart enough to feel that legal fees eat into $30,000 pretty deep and to a dog this would not make sense.

I do NOT request that all my just debts be paid.

Being a dog, I have never run into debt and have always tried fully to return my obligations in love, devotion and protection, with compound interest. I know of no time when I failed in this virtue.

I have, it is true, torn the fringe from a rug or two, scratched a few doors, and dug holes in the lawn; if anybody feels they should be remunerated, all very well, but it is my impression I was always detected, admonished and made to settle on the spot.

If my dog sense is wrong and anybody I owe and loved wants the $30,000 or any part of it and is in need of it, I make no protest. In reaching decisions I am influenced only by affection, sympathy, good will and a love of all mankind. The fact money is involved makes no difference in these decisions.

Money puzzles me. I've heard lots of talk about it and have formed an impression it must be important. It has given me certain comforts and protections, but it cannot be any too good a factor in life because I have heard too many humans quarrel over it.

Having made these observations I make these provisions:

1—To such dogs as are sick and in need I leave my entire estate, without specifying to the last comma just how this shall be done. It seems to me, being only of canine intelligence, that something has to be left to chance and good faith.

2—To my master and mistress I leave my undying love and devotion. I wish I had more to give. It was always deeper than they knew but never as deep as I desired. If there is a dog heaven I hope to look upon them from there, hear their voices and catch something dearer to me than all the money on earth—the sound of their footsteps on a gravel path.

3—To all human beings I bequeath affection and best wishes. I never met a person I didn't like. That goes even for the peddlers, the tramps and a certain burglar I once met. I really liked the tramps and there was something about that burglar, too.

4. In the event another dog takes my place in the household I intrust to it the job of catching the squirrel that has been around the yard ever since I can remember. But I don't think he'll have any more luck than I did.

By my hand and seal this 8th day of August, 1944.

Common Knowledge

By Truman Twill

Things everybody is supposed to know are matters of common knowledge, such as two and two are four, a straight line is the shortest distance between two points, the name of the first horse to win a Kentucky Derby was Aristides, men's clothing buttons to the right, and rabbits are scared by the odor of blood.

The important thing about common knowledge is that since everybody is supposed to know it there isn't supposed to be any room for doubt about it, but this is not always true, such as water always swirling in the same direction when it goes down a hole, making nails stick tight by wetting them before pounding, fishing better in the dark of the moon, Harvard university having the largest endowment of any educational institution and the fact that baseball never could have developed as the national game if the distance from home to first hadn't been set just right at 90 feet.

In order to keep from getting into arguments, it is wise never to say something is a matter of common knowledge, unless no one gives a hoot. For example, the birds usually get more than their share of sweet cherries, the next important change in automobiles will be to move the engine from the front to the rear, most students will flunk a blindfold test, the best way to punish dogs and cats is with a folded newspaper because it makes a lot of noise but doesn't hurt, and a little kerosene added to whitewash will make it water-resistant. So what?

Things which are matters of common knowledge to one group may not be matters of common knowledge to another group, such as the ulterior motives of politicians, the inferior dramatic ability of certain widely publicized movie stars, the general superiority of the music of Tschaikovsky, the higher excellence of the loganberry as against all similar berries for preserves, and the merit of electric beaters compared with all other methods. They start wars and arguments.

The surest and quickest way to pick a fight is to state that something is a matter of common knowledge when it is still in the speculative stage, such as the reason for Germany not invading England being that it lacked the specialized craft for getting across the English channel, the coming of the economy-size automobile in the United States in the wake of the publicity given the jeep, the merits of the Congressional Record as straight reading matter, the setback given post-war tourist travel by the bad reports from overseas fighting men, and the advantages of tying tomatoes to stakes.

On the whole, it is safer to skip matters of common knowledge altogether, even doing two and two being four because any nasty mathematician can prove that two and two do not make four—and that, too, is a matter of common knowledge, or isn't it?

SCHOOL BOARD

is widely known among Ohio conference football fans, having been an all-conference center for two years.

Shackelford, taking over the coaching position at Central, has had 16 years of teaching experience, the last seven at Spencerville as physical education instructor and coach. He is a graduate of Ohio Northern University and Ohio State University.

Nicholson, coach and industrial arts teacher at Vernon Junior High, taught in his home community of Byesville for seven years, taught two years at Bethesda and has had some industrial experience.

Resignations accepted by the board were those of Jane Thomas Townley, who had been signed to teach this year, Mary Margaret Cusack, Ellsworth Cooperrider and LaVina Busch, all of the Central Junior High staff, Dan Salter of the Vernon Junior High staff and Charles Romoser, custodian at Glenwood.

A leave of absence was granted Miss Mary Jo Stafford, at her request. She has been teaching English and journalism at Edison Junior High and was to have gone to Harding High this year to teach speech and coach plays.

Other Employes

The board approved the employment of John Fetter as a custodian at Olney Avenue school at a salary of $135 a month. Glenn Riddle, a custodian at Olney, has been transferred to Glenwood to replace Mr. Romoser, who resigned. Mr. Riddle was granted a salary increase from $130 to $140.

The list of custodians and secretaries approved by the board, in addition to the changes made yesterday, includes L. E. Welch, superintendent of buildings and grounds, $195 a month; Ray Adams, $140; Daniel Fout, $140; W. Wetterauer, $140; Charles Clark, $150; Glenn Riddle, $140; Carl Cross, $140; Roy McCombs, $150; Herman Powelson, $150; Lonnie Holbrook, $140; Delbert Davis, $135; John Creasap, $145; Cyril Blow, $150; Harold Peak, $140; Henry Holland, Floyd Call, John Hall, John Fetter, James Barkley and H. B. Ellison, $135 each; Vera Stull, $135; Mary K. Miley, $120, and Mary Belle Eberhart, $85, all at superintendent's office; Elizabeth Pace, $120, Harding High school, Elnora Dunlap, $85, Central Junior High office; Jane Meister, $85, Edison Junior High office.

Building Study Ordered

In retaining Mr. McLaughlin, Lima architect, the board specified that he is make further studies with the board and the superintendent for the school building needs in Marion and to prepare plans for those buildings that are found needed. Board members said they had given prolonged consideration to the problem of school housing and had made use of the study made by G. E. Irons, commissioner of school housing for the Cleveland board of education, about two years ago in studying the city's current needs. His appraisal of present buildings and suggestions of new buildings have been the basis of the board's current consideration of the problem.

"It is not planned," board members said, "to present a proposed building program to the vote of the electors at the present time, but it is the plan of the board to make such preparation as is necessary for submitting such proposals to the electors when the appropriate time arrives."

Contract Provision

The board's contract with Mr. McLaughlin provides that it agrees to retain the services of him and his firm when and if a building program is approved by the voters. The board reserved the right to have local architects associated with the Lima firm in the supervision of construction. Board members said it is the intention of the board, as plans progress, to discuss with representative citizens the recommendations contained in survey made by Mr. Irons for school housing and also the proposed buildings for which Mr. McLaughlin will be preparing plans.

It is expected the school board will have a definite building program proposal ready in time for consideration along with other local projects in any postwar building program for which the federal government might provide some financial assistance.

Mr. McLaughlin is known in Marion, having been the architect for the addition to the Marion City hospital.

Budget Details

The budget for 1945 given formal approval of the board yesterday following a hearing on July 27 at which no protests were received, provides for operations on substantially the same basis as at present and calls for expenditure of $498,240.40 as against estimated receipts of $512,514.85. Although this would appear to leave a balance of $14,274.45, that balance, plus some additional money not yet in sight, will have been encumbered by the end of next year, board members said, explaining that the moneys paid out in the calendar year of 1945 would not fully pay the teaching staff for all its 1945 work, one payroll for 1945 services falling due in January of 1945.

Principal expenditures listed in the budget for next year are $346,000 for personal service for instruction of pupils, $15,900 administrative expenses, $18,000 instruction expenses other than personal service, $38,000 for custodians' salaries, $30,000 for other school plant operating expenses, $10,550 for permanent improvements, $10,000 for repair of old buildings. Principal sources of anticipated revenue are $292,511 from general property tax, $178,315 from state foundation funds.

War Chest Drive Plans Pushed

Additional committees were named and plans discussed for the annual campaign to raise funds to carry on the work of the Marion Community Foundation, Inc. (Marion United War Chest at a meeting of the executive committee of the foundation Monday night. J. E. Oliphant was in charge of the meeting, held in the Community Foundation office.

Plans are progressing in fine shape it was brought out in the discussions of the various phases of the campaign which will be staged in the early fall, and it is expected that the naming of chairmen and committees will be completed within a few days. Committees, whose duties include the laying of the groundwork for the campaign, have already begun their work, and others, to be named soon, will begin their activities in the near future.

Quota Committee

One of the first groups to get under way is the quota committee named Monday night. Heading the committee is Russell C. Snare, chairman, and serving with him will be Paul Bachman, George Wilson, Francis Huber, H. L. Wade and Edgar Barnhart. Also named were the advisory board chairmen and the budget committee both of which will launch their plans immediately. Ben T. Wiant and Ed Parr will act as chairmen for the advisory board composed of representatives of management and labor whose business it is to plan and outline campaign activities.

Howard Guthery was named chairman of the budget committee and serving with him are Ned Parshall, John Zuck, C. O. Brown and Morgan Burke. Budgets of the various participating agencies will be submitted to this committee for review before their presentation to the foundation board. The foundation is asking all agencies to prepare their budgets for 1944-45 as early as possible in order that the committee may have ample time for a study and consideration of the various requests.

The publicity committee, appointed earlier this summer, has held several meetings and is developing a number of plans for pre-campaign activities. Serving on this committee are Ted Witter, chairman, Jack Danner, Bobi Byrd, Miss Madge Cooper and George E. Planck.

A report on a proposed plan for a survey of activities of social agencies in Marion was given by D. T. Mills a member of the committee. Approval of the plan was voiced by the board and it is expected the survey will get under way in the near future.

While no definite date has been set for the campaign it is expected it will be staged in the early fall. Definite plans are awaiting announcement of the national campaign which will be decided after the states have signified a preference for dates most convenient for their workers.

Place of German Stand Becomes Question of Day

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

With Hitler bent on a fresh fight—if he can force his armies and homefront to support him—the question naturally arises as to where he intends to make his stand against the allied drives in the western and eastern theaters.

First we must note that his general strategy provides for delaying action while he retires as gradually as possible to his inner fortress, that is, to the borders of the reich itself. This strategy will persist, although there will be tactical innovations to meet emergencies.

For instance, the Germans predict an invasion of southern France through the Rhone valley. Should that eventuate and it certainly might—it won't create a fresh crisis for Hitler, but it wouldn't alter his broad program of retirement for a last-ditch fight on his own borders.

Swings from Caen

In France the fuehrer is swinging his front in the invasion zone back to the northeast, using the bloody Caen sector as his pivot. A dispatch from Spain says he ever has abandoned his Atlantic defenses in southwest France, except for a light screen, and is withdrawing his troops northward because of the allied successes in Normandy and Brittany.

Yesterday's unsuccessful German counter-attack against the Americans in the Avranches sector is into this picture perfectly. It was purely defensive and was calculated to delay the allied advance toward Paris, thereby safeguarding the Nazi retreat.

The main German retirement will be northeastward, covering both Paris and the vital English channel coast. Hitler will defend Paris if he can, but he likely will find it a hot potato to hang onto. He must protect the coast during his retreat in order to prevent the allies from pouring troops and equipment into France across the narrow part of the channel and cutting his line of withdrawal. This area also is the nesting ground for the robot bombs which he hopes will crack British morale.

To Follow Old Route

The Nazi dictator presumably will continue over the old invasion route through Belgium and thence into Germany. He may try to make a stand behind the Maginot line and undoubtedly will do so back of his own Siegfried wall. The fact that he himself outflanked the Maginot line at the outset of this war doesn't prove that such defenses are useless. Should the Germans have to defend the Rhone valley, their ultimate court of retreat probably would be across the southwest German border in the Belfort area.

Over on the Russo-German front the Hitlerites already are making their last big stand before they reach their own frontier. They're trying to hold a front protecting the "sacred" East Prussian border and thence southward along the line of the great Vistula river which runs through besieged Warsaw.

Once the Nazis are forced to abandon this line, there will be no strong natural defenses until they finally reach the big Oder river inside the boundary of the fatherland. True, they have prepared several lines of defense between the Vistula and the reich, but these fortifications lack the natural features to give them strength.

The fighting at strategic points is fierce, and it may be the Nazis are getting some easement through possible Russian need to slow up momentarily in order to bring forward communications after the long, fast drive of the Red armies. However, the Russ-routes have the situation well in hand. They're across the Vistula in the Cracow sector, a dangerous zone for the Hitlerites. A Red break-through below Warsaw would turn the whole German flank and force wholesale withdrawal.

Enemy Agents

PHILADELPHIA'S transportation tie-up which was accomplished by a couple of officials and semi-official speculation about the part being played in it by enemy agents, suggests that America has vastly more to fear from its own experts in matters of this kind than from alien trouble-makers.

Their prejudice, misunderstanding, misinformation and lack of discipline have made the fertile soil for whatever seeds of dissension may have been sown in the United States by professional subversionists. A country may be free from enemy agents, yet still contain within itself the potentialities of greater trouble than enemy agents could hope to foment.

Philadelphia's troubles, like those in Detroit last year, represent a showdown in America between those who understand the principles of the Constitution they live under and those who neither understand nor agree with those principles. Civil insurrection in wartime, wherever it occurs, is a challenge to the forces of unity which are the nation's hope of survival.

Perhaps it may be proved that the enemy had something to do with Philadelphia's violent confusion of the last few days, but without the eager assistance of Philadelphians, themselves, it couldn't have happened. Fortunately, the tiny minority which always causes the trouble has tipped its hand, which should make it easy for Philadelphians who resent the black eye given their city to place the blame.

Who Are the Germans?

THERE is frank astonishment on the part of war correspondents and the United States fighting men they quote in their despatches because the Germans captured in France and Italy do not all behave like Nazis—and because so many of them are not Germans at all, but foreigners pressed into military service. This does not square with the usual impression of the German army.

The revelation should be helpful not only to American fighting men, but civilians. In World war I, Kaiser Wilhelm and the Junkers were the German prototypes. In this war, the prototypes were the bull-necked, hard-faced Nazis who posed for pictures during the Polish and French invasions—physical specimens whose thinking was done for them by the plotting Hitler and his National Socialist counsellors.

The Germans were never the Junkers, and now that the Junkers are being "put on the wall" by the Nazis, the Germans are not the Nazis, either. They are, in a military sense, all the people on the other side. Prime Minister Churchill is being whiplashed by critics for pointing out a few days ago that the war grows less ideological as it wears on to its conclusion, but he put his finger on an evident truth. A Polish conscript fighting in a German uniform cannot be called an ideological enemy, but the bullets he fires are just as deadly as the bullets fired by a Nazi fanatic. Likewise, death dealt by a Bavarian farm boy who is fighting only because of loyalty to Germany, right or wrong, is just as permanent as that dealt by a professional soldier. The Germans are the people on the other side and they are of all kinds, a fact that will be realized by United States fighting men long before civilians comprehend it.

Back To Voting Fundamentals

ASIDE from extraneous issues and added complications, CIO's chief political significance in 1944 is its use of the standard vote-getting technique of the two major parties. To the extent that it has made and will make itself felt by getting voters registered and then getting them to the polls when it is time to vote, CIO merely has gone back to the fundamentals of Republican and Democratic organization.

Tally clerks on election night cannot count sympathy or good intentions. They can register nothing but marks on ballots in the right places, a fact frequently overlooked in recent years as party workers shifted their attention from grass roots electioneering to public opinion polls which merely recorded what theoretical voters would do if opinions were counted, instead of votes.

The CIO frankly aims to make a demonstration of the power of organization in politics. It intends to prove that a political minority can hold the balance of power. Those who cry out in indignation against the organization's beliefs, calling them a threat to national principles, had better be spending their time devising ways and means of making sure they don't lose their point by default at the polls—where all decisions must be made ultimately.

News Behind the News

Future Security Believed To Rest in Ingenuity Rather Than Weapons or Pacts.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—Terrific weapons of destruction are being developed in this war but the real peace will be won by the ingenuity of the people.

The people have never been more determined to have lasting peace. Never have they been more willing to make the sacrifices demanded on New Fronts. The enemy supplement promises of welfare are supported by a new determination to make them come true.

By these and other new implements, many of which we already have, greatly developed through necessity, the people have come to realize that weapons of the future will spread greater destruction. Since improvements will increasingly kill more and more thousands of persons.

The average run of comment held, therefore, that we must rely mainly only on our Navy and our air force in the post-war period.

We have a Navy now reputed at nearly 5 to 1 over Britain, and so many ships in the Pacific, it may prove difficult to assign them all an effective war task. As one naval authority has put it:

"We have so many ships we do not know what to do with them."

The American air force also will come out of this war the greatest in the world. Our Army, they say, never again will be allowed to deteriorate as it has in the past.

Fooling Ourselves?

Thus we are preparing in the future to maintain ourselves in permanent peace. It seems to me that, in the instance again, we are fooling ourselves.

No weapon, no new device of destruction, ever assured security to a nation. The French built a Maginot line, which was impregnable to them. The ancient Chinese built the wall of China which to them was the same thing to their people.

Are we not today being just as short-sighted in our thinking on defense and our preparations for our future security, as were the French, the ancient Chinese, and, in fact, all defenses of every nation in the history of the world?

What is security, if it is not walls, ditches, planes, armies? What can make a people secure?

Ingenuity Called the Answer

Only their own ingenuity, in my opinion. Only in the mind of man can be find the stones for impregnable fortifications. Only by constant alertness and wise leadership can we provide for his safety.

Wisdom, in my opinion, is more important today than navies, planes and armies, because what good are these if they are not put to superior use.

To be static is to be weak, no matter what the size of the defending force. The minds of the generals of France, like their people, were confident in their security and, therefore, unalert to their danger. They had the best wall ever built up to that time.

We will have the best defending force. But it will be useless unless the psychological attitude of our leaders and our people changes. There must be a new doctrine of realism propounded. It must say:

"You are never secure. There is no security in the very nature of things. There never has been. There never will be. That nation maintains itself longest which is alert, wise, and therefore, realistic."

Answers for Weapons

So also with weapons. There never was a weapon made in the history of the world for which there was no adequate or superior answer. These robots might spread greater destruction than shells, and they may grow larger and larger, but an answer will be found for them.

The only lesson of science in this war is that methods of destruction are rapidly now amplifying their field of operations. Is the answer not then plain?

Ships, planes and guns we may need aplenty. Pacts, divisions of territory, splitting of Europe into small separate parts may be devised.

But what good are any or all of these things if they are not wisely conceived on a basis of realism, and constantly, alertly administered.

Politics may be shrewd and develop high sounding palliatives. Warriors may devise greater and greater defenses and weapons. But what we need is wisdom and ceaseless alertness—something for which we do not seem to be searching very hard.

No Trespassing!

U. S. Now Prepared To Enforce Monroe Doctrine.

THE long struggle to keep the new world from being an annex for Europe's ambitions and hatreds has reached a fresh climax in strained relations between the United States and Argentina.

The struggle began generations ago. By location, language, culture, business connections and sympathy, South America is closer to Europe than to North America. It has been regarded by Europeans as a sort of special prize — since long before the United States became aware of its importance to the security of this hemisphere.

Germans, Italians, Spaniards and the British have competed to its riches and esteem, usually at the expense of the United States, often slow to understand the kind of game it was playing, frequently awkward in its moves.

While Europeans and even Japanese were working systematically to advance their interests, the United States was following a hit-and-miss plan under a false sense of security created by the century-old Monroe Doctrine.

In effect, what is happening today is happening because the Monroe Doctrine has been challenged. The United States fears Germany may move its Fascism to South America lock, stock and barrel, unless the original purpose of the doctrine is revived.

This time it is not the Holy Alliance which seeks to extend influence into this hemisphere, but an unholy alliance of Germany and Japan. But this time, there is another difference, too. The United States is no longer a weak, experimental republic, depending heavily on Great Britain, as it was a century ago.

When President Monroe told the European powers in 1823 that the American continents no longer were to be considered as subjects for future colonization and that any attempt to extend their systems to any portion of this hemisphere would be viewed with alarm, his words carried real weight, because Great Britain was ready to back them up. It is not clear where Britain may choose to stand now that the danger has reappeared, in modern form, but with or without Britain the United States can back up its words.

LATIN AMERICA did not like everything about the Monroe Doctrine in 1823 and still has misgivings in 1944. Fumbling, impotence and downright insincerity in its application during the 19th century and part of the present century gave many Latin Americans more reason to resent the encroachment of the United States than that of European powers.

Yet, as foreign policies go, the doctrine was well founded and reasonably well administered. After more than a century of continuous, if not always intelligent, application, it has reached a climax in the "good neighbor" plan.

Insofar as foreign policy reflects the attitudes of the people behind governments — which it must do if it is to be sound and continuous — the United States seeks nothing in Latin America but the conditions of mutual security and prosperity. Only Argentina openly questions this country's intentions toward Latin America.

By circumstances, rather than conviction, the United States has been forced to abandon insistence on representative government as a pre-requisite for good relations. There are many shades of republicanism among the Latin American republics — none of them identical with the shade familiar in this country and most of them resembling dictatorship.

The kind of government has become less important than the effect of government. As long as there is no armed aggression—no strong challenge to hemispheric security — public opinion in the United States will be tolerant. It will cease to be tolerant, as the state department already has ceased to be tolerant whenever a Latin American government for any reason whatever threatens to violate the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine.

Argentina has led dissent and resistance to the good neighbor plan but it is significant that Argentina has been stranded by diplomatic events as a minority of one among the Latin American republics.

THE danger looming in Argentina needs to be realized and talked about openly. Argentina as a single nation susceptible to foreign influences hostile to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine is not of momentous importance. But Argentina as a possible refuge for German Nazis scuttling out of Europe to find refuge in a friendly atmosphere in the New World is of extreme importance.

Not only would the migrant Nazis be enabled to preserve their identity for the doing of further mischief, but their influence over Argentina inevitably would encourage the growth of militant nationalism in that country. Argentinians, in that event, would be cast in the same role as that of the Italians who threw in their lot with the Germans under the puppet leadership of Mussolini—and discovered too late that the Germans were doing all the leading.

Great Britain, with its vast commercial stake in Argentina, can no more permit that possibility to materialize than can the United States. While the British may exert through investment and commerce an influence even greater than that of Germany on Argentina as a whole, they have not sought to exert it on a straight political basis, as the Germans have.

Other South American countries may waver later, but so far it is Argentina alone which has been hostile to the United States, the Allies and the United Nations. Argentina alone has discouraged the hope that when the wars in Europe and Asia have been won there may be no out-cropping of the same infections in the new world.

THE MAD RUSH-IN

Clean-Up Squads

WHO cleans up the mess left by battling armies? In this war, the mess is cleaned up by two efficient, well-planned, far-sighted outfits who make mess-cleaning their business.

They are the AMG and ACC (Allied Military Government and Allied Control Commission). These are the organizations which ride with the first wave of invasion to take over local governments, restore order and control foreign civilians so combat troops may advance unhindered.

Nation's Business reports that they go in with the fighters, taking food, money, stamps and proclamations. Like the money and stamps, the proclamations are printed in advance.

Announce the occupation, specify what offenses are crimes, establish allied military courts, fix rates of exchange for the new currency, declare a moratorium and close the banks, annul previous laws against Allies and races, appoint custodians for enemy and alien property, fix a sunset-to-sunrise curfew and confiscate weapons and radio transmitters.

The Allied officers seek responsible persons among the civilians — the mayor or deputy mayor, the chief of police, the fire chief, a priest, a doctor, and these are put in charge of other civilian groups, to put out fires, administer to the injured, bury the dead — and later carry on the business of reestablishing the community as a going concern.

Communications are restored, utilities repaired, transportation maintained and medical service organized.

Millions of civilians must be given work to feed and clothe themselves, supplies must be brought in, little shops must open with goods on their shelves, wheels must turn again in mills and factories, wreckage must be cleared away and rebuilt, sanitation and health must be cared for, and while providing these material needs, a new and radically different form of government must be set up, economic structures from finance to production and labor reformed on democratic lines and the lives and ideas of the people turned toward a brighter future.

Rennes

In Brittany all roads lead to Rennes, the railway, highway, and inland waterway junction in northwest France reached by United States forces.

The city is a funnel for nearly all surface traffic to and from the large Brittany Peninsula with its important port of Brest. Nazis caught behind the American thrust to Rennes have only one railroad and one major road—both following the south coast—on which to escape.

With its more than 93,000 peacetime inhabitants, Rennes is by far the largest city in France yet reached by the Allies, says National Geographic society. Its present-day importance, in peace or war, is as a transportation center, but 1,000 years ago it was the capital of Brittany, then an independent dukedom like Normandy. For centuries after the freedom-loving Bretons accepted French rule, Rennes was the defender and champion of their minority rights.

A great fire that raged for seven days in 1720 destroyed nearly every vestige of the great medieval capital city. Rennes was rebuilt in dark granite on a simple, geometric plan that spoiled its individuality. Its great museums, university, cathedral, lyceum, and academies are not the exciting architectural monuments found in other French provincial capitals.

Modern Rennes is built on both sides of the Vilaine river, connected by canal with the Rance to form a cross-peninsula waterway.

Last Will and Testament of a Dog

"A 14-year-old dog died here, leaving an estate of $30,000. The money had been left to it by its owner and will now go for the use of other dogs. —Wisconsin news item.

BEING of sound mind as dogs go, which is more than can be said for some humans, I hereby declare this to be my last will and testament, naming no trustees or executors, as a dog has implicit faith and confidence in the honesty and good will of the human race to consider any such provisions of this nature necessary. I distrust nobody. I am not beset by suspicion.

I hope no lawyers will be required. I am only a dog's property but I am smart enough to feel that legal fees eat into $30,000 pretty fast and to a dog this would not make sense.

I do NOT request that all my just debts be paid.

Being a dog, I have never run into debt and have always tried fully to return my obligations in love, devotion and protection, with compound interest. I know of no time when I failed in this virtue.

I have, it is true, torn the fringe from a rug or two, scratched a few doors, and dug holes in the lawn; if anybody feels they should be remunerated, all very well, but it is my impression I was always detected, admonished and made to settle on the spot.

If my dog sense is wrong and anybody I owned and loved wants the $30,000 or any part of it and is in need of it, I make no protest. In reaching decisions I am influenced only by affection, sympathy, good will and a love of all mankind. The fact money is involved makes no difference in these decisions.

Money puzzles me. I've heard lots of talk about it and have formed an impression it must be important. It has given me certain comforts and protections, but it cannot be any too good a factor in life because I have heard too many humans quarrel over it.

Having made these observations I make these provisions:

1—To such dogs as are sick and in need I leave my entire estate, without specifying to the last comma just how this shall be done. It seems to me, being only of canine intelligence, that something has to be left to chance and good faith.

2—To my master and mistress I leave my undying love and devotion. I wish I had more to give. It was always deeper than they knew but never as deep as I desired. If there is a dog heaven I hope to look upon them from there, hear their voices and catch something dearer to me than all the money on earth—the sound of their footsteps on a gravel path.

3—To all human beings I bequeath affection and best wishes. I never met a person I didn't like. That goes even for the peddlers, the tramps and a certain burglar I once met. I really liked the tramps and there was something about that burglar, too.

4. In the event another dog takes my place in the household I intrust to it the job of catching the squirrel that has been around the yard ever since I can remember. But I don't think he'll have any more luck than I did.

By my hand and seal this 8th day of August, 1944.

Common Knowledge

By Truman Twill

Things everybody is supposed to know are matters of common knowledge, such as two and two are four, a straight line is the shortest distance between two points, the name of the first horse to win a Kentucky Derby was Aristides, men's clothing buttons to the right, and rabbits are scared by the odor of blood.

The important thing about common knowledge is that since everybody is supposed to know it there isn't supposed to be any room for doubt about it, but this is not always true, such as water always swirling in the same direction when it goes down a hole, making nails stick tight by wetting them before pounding, fish biting better in the dark of the moon, Harvard university having the largest endowment of any educational institution and the fact that baseball never could have developed as the national game if the distance from home to first hadn't been set just right at 90 feet.

In order to keep from getting into arguments, it is wise never to say something is a matter of common knowledge, unless no one gives a hoot. For example, the birds usually get more than their share of sweet cherries, the next important change in automobiles will be to move the engine from the front to the rear, most smokers will flunk a blindfold test, the best way to punish dogs and cats is with a folded newspaper because it makes a lot of noise but doesn't hurt, and a little kerosene added to whitewash will make it water-resistant. So what?

Things which are matters of common knowledge to one group may not be matters of common knowledge to another group, such as the ulterior motives of politicians, the inferior dramatic ability of certain widely publicized movie stars, the general superiority of the music of Tschaikovsky, the higher excellence of the wild dewberry as against all similar berries for preserves, and the merit of electric beaters compared with all other methods. They start arguments.

The surest and quickest way to pick a fight is to state that something is a matter of common knowledge when it is still in the speculative stage, such as the reason for Germany not invading England being that it lacked the specialized craft for getting across the English channel, the coming of the economy-size automobile in the United States in the wake of the publicity given the jeep, the merits of the Congressional Record as straight reading matter, the setback given post-war tourist travel by the bad reports from overseas fighting men, and the advantages of tying tomatoes to stakes.

On the whole, it is safer to skip matters of common knowledge altogether, even down to two and two being four because any bored mathematician can prove that two and two do not make four—and that, too, is a matter of common knowledge, or isn't it?

SCHOOL BOARD

...is widely known among Ohio conference football fans, having been an all-conference center for two years

Snackelford, taking over the coaching position at Central, has had 16 years of teaching experience, the last seven at Spencerville as physical education instructor and coach. He is a graduate of Ohio Northern University and Ohio State University.

Nicholson, coach and industrial arts teacher at Vernon Junior High, taught in his home community of Byesville for seven years, taught two years at Bethesda and has had some industrial experience.

Resignations accepted by the board were those of Jane Thomas Townley, who had been signed to teach this year, Mary Margaret Cusack, Ellsworth Cooperrider and LaVina Busch, all of the Central Junior High staff, Dan Salter of the Vernon Junior High staff and Charles Romoser, custodian at Glenwood.

A leave of absence was granted Miss Mary Jo Stafford, at her request. She has been teaching English and journalism at Edison Junior High and was to have gone to Harding High this year to teach speech and coach plays.

Other Employes

The board approved the employment of John Fetter as a custodian at Olney Avenue school at a salary of $135 a month. Glenn Riddle, a custodian at Olney, has been transferred to Glenwood to replace Mr. Romoser, who resigned. Mr. Riddle was granted a salary increase from $130 to $140

The list of custodians and secretaries approved by the board, in addition to the changes made yesterday, includes L E. Welch, superintendent of buildings and grounds, $195 a month; Ray Adams, $140; Daniel Foul, $140; W. Wetterauer, $140; Charles Clark, $150, Glenn Riddle, $140; Carl Cross, $140; Roy McCombs, $150; Herman Powelson, $150; Lonnie Holbrook, $140; Delbert Davis, $135; John Creasap, $145; Cyril Blow, $150; Harold Peak, $140, Henry Holland, Floyd Call, Jonn Hall, John Fetter, James Barkley and H B. Ellison, $135 each; Vera Stull, $135, Mary K. Miley, $120, and Mary Belle Eberhart, $85, all at superintendent's office; Elizabeth Pace, $120; Harding High school; Elnora Dunlap, $85, Central Junior High office; Jane Meister, $85, Edison Junior High office.

Building Study Ordered

In retaining Mr. McLaughlin, Lima architect, the board specified that he is make further studies with the board and the superintendent for the school building needs in Marion and to prepare plans for those buildings that are found needed. Board members said they had given prolonged consideration to the problem of school housing and had made use of the study made by G. E. Irons, commissioner of school housing for the Cleveland board of education, about two years ago in studying the city's current needs His appraisal of present buildings and suggestions of new buildings have been the basis of the board's current consideration of the problem.

"It is not planned," board members said, "to present a proposed building program to the vote of the electors at the present time, but it is the plan of the board to make such preparation as is necessary for submitting such proposals to the electors when the appropriate time arrives."

Contract Provision

The board's contract with Mr. McLaughlin provides that it agrees to retain the services of him and his firm when and if a building program is approved by the voters. The board reserved the right to have local architects associated with the Lima firm in the supervision of construction. Board members said it is the intention of the board, as plans progress, to discuss with representative citizens the recommendations contained in survey made by Mr. Irons for school housing and also the proposed buildings for which Mr. McLaughlin will be preparing plans

It is expected the school board will have a definite building program proposal ready in time for consideration along with other local projects in any postwar building program for which the federal government might provide some financial assistance.

Mr McLaughlin is known in Marion, having been the architect for the addition to the Marion City hospital

Budget Details

The budget for 1945 given formal approval of the board yesterday following a hearing on July 27 at which no protests were received, provides for operations on substantially the same basis as at present and calls for expenditure of $498,240.40 as against estimated receipts of $512,514.85. Although this would appear to leave a balance of $14,274 45, that balance, plus some additional money not yet in sight, will have been encumbered by the end of next year, board members said, explaining that the moneys paid out in the calendar year of 1945 would not fully pay the teaching staff for all its 1945 work, one payroll for 1945 services falling due in January of 1946.

Principal expenditures listed in the budget for next year are $346,000 for personal service for instruction of pupils, $15,900 administrative expenses, $18,000 instruction expenses other than personal service, $38,000 for custodians' salaries, $30,000 for other school plant operating expenses, $10,550 for permanent improvements, $10,000 for repair of old buildings Principal sources of anticipated revenue are $293,511 from general property tax, $178,315 from state foundation funds.

A report on a proposed plan for a survey of activities of social agencies in Marion was given by D. T. Mills, a member of the committee Approval of the plan was voiced by the board and it is expected the survey will get under way in the near future.

While no definite date has been set for the campaign it is expected it will be staged in the early fall Definite plans are awaiting announcement of the national campaign which will be decided after the states have signified a preference for dates most convenient for their workers.

Place of German Stand Becomes Question of Day

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

With Hitler bent on a fight to the finish—if he can force his armies and homefront to support him—the question naturally arises as to where he intends to make his stands against the allied drives in the western and eastern theaters

First we must note that his general strategy provides for delaying action while he retires as gradually as possible to his inner fortress, that is, to the borders of the reich itself This strategy will persist, although there will be tactical innovations to meet emergencies.

For instance, the Germans predict an invasion of southern France through the Rhone valley Should that eventuate and it certainly might—it would create a fresh crisis for Hitler, but it wouldn't alter his broad program of retirement for a last-ditch fight on his own borders.

Swings from Caen

In France the fuehrer is swinging his front in the invasion zone back to the northeast, using the bloody Caen sector as his pivot. A dispatch from Spain says he even has abandoned his Atlantic defenses in southwest France except for a light guard, and is withdrawing his troops northward because of the allied successes in Normandy and Brittany.

Yesterday's unsuccessful German counter-attack against the Americans in the Avranches sector fits into this picture perfectly It was purely defensive and was calculated to delay the allied advance toward Paris, thereby safeguarding the Nazi retreat.

The main German retirement will be northeastward, covering both Paris and the vital English channel coast. Hitler will defend Paris if he can, but he likely will find it a hot potato to hang onto He must protect the coast during his retreat in order to prevent the allies from pouring troops and equipment into France across the narrow part of the channel and cutting his line of withdrawal. This area also is the nesting ground for the robot bombs which he hopes will crack British morale

To Follow Old Route

The Nazi dictator presumably will continue over the old invasion route through Belgium and thence into Germany He may try to make a stand behind the Maginot line and undoubtedly will do so back of his own Siegfried wall. The fact that he himself outflanked the Maginot line at the outset of this war doesn't prove that such defenses are useless. Should the Germans have to defend the Rhone valley, their ultimate court of retreat probably would be across the southwest German border in the Belfort area.

Over on the Russo-German front the Hitlerites already are making their last big stand before they reach their own frontier. They're trying to hold a front protecting the "sacred" East Prussian border and thence southward along the line of the great Vistula river which runs through besieged Warsaw.

Once the Nazis are forced to abandon this line, there will be no strong natural defenses until they finally reach the big Oder river inside the boundary of the fatherland. True, they have prepared several lines of defense between the Vistula and the reich, but these fortifications lack the natural features to give them strength.

The fighting at strategic points is fierce, and it may be the Nazis are getting some easement through possible Russian need to slow up momentarily in order to bring forward communications after the long, fast drive of the Red armies. However, the Muscovites have the situation well in hand. They're across the Vistula in the Cracow sector, a dangerous zone for the Hitlerites A Red break-through below Warsaw would turn the whole German flank and force wholesale withdrawal.

RESCUE SHAFT NEAR TRAPPED MINERS

By The Associated Press

BELLAIRE, O., Aug 8 Rescue crews reported early today they were within 470 feet of the mine where bodies of the 301 miners are entombed in the Fish-Bassett Hollow shaft mine here

The men were trapped in the mine by explosions and fire the rescue crews now have but more than 300 feet through the Fish-Bassett Hollow shaft in the effort to recover the bodies

The crews are hoped to reach the bodies by next Monday They expected that drilling through the last 125 feet in the sealed-off area would present that it would be necessary to make test holes in order to prevent the men here from making the rescue shaft too explosive

Oxygen masks to go free the area where the fire is burning might endanger the lives of the rescuers of the breakthrough occurred suddenly, it was explained When the test holes penetrate to where the fire is burning, the remainder of the drilling will have to be done by hand.

A temporary morgue already has been set up at the shaft and the bodies will be taken there for identification and preparation for burial Another building also has been erected at the site to house crews which will bring the bodies to the surface

Those men will be brought to the mine when the drillers are within 15 to 20 feet of the entombed boys and will remain at the scene until all of the bodies have been recovered

Adolph Pacifico, vice president of district 6, United Mine Workers said the drillers are making faster progress through the slope than at any other time in the history of mining Never before he said, have drillers proceeded at more than 60 feet a day The crews here have been driving through the slope at the rate of 100 feet a day.

GRAND JURY STARTS RAIL STRIKE PROBE

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8—Philadelphia looked to FBI agents and a federal grand jury today for possible sensational disclosures in a paralyzing, six-day transit strike that developed with flashing suddenness and without apparent organized leadership, inspiring a union's charges of "company collusion" and "sinister enemy activity."

"We are going after the big fish," a federal spokesman said as the FBI marsed data and the grand jury prepared to convene tomorrow to hear at least 35 persons, including strikers, Philadelphia Transportation Co. officials, officers of the CIO transport workers union and government war agency officials

"The workers were * * * pushed out on a checker board as pawns in a sinister game," said the CIO transport workers union.

The strike, a protest against the upgrading of eight Negroes to drivers' jobs under a fair employment practice committee directive, began early last Tuesday morning without apparent warning and was crushed completely early yesterday after the Army seized the lines by order of President Roosevelt. Armed troops continued to ride every moving bus, trolley, subway and subway-elevated train today.

NAZIS PULLING OUT OF SOUTH FRANCE

By The Associated Press

IRUN, Spain, Aug 8 —Adolf Hitler's unconquered Atlantic wall for more than 100 miles along the Spanish frontier norththrough Bordeaux has been virtually abandoned and is manned by only a handful of over-aged German railroad troops, advices from France said today.

These Nazi fortifications have been outflanked to the north by the swift progress of American troops through Brittany and eastward towards Paris in much the same way as the Maginot line was outflanked when the Germans broke through Belgium in 1940.

With their communications seriously menaced, the Germans were said to have begun a full scale evacuation of their forces in southwestern France, leaving only a few Gestapo agents and gendarmes to cover the French-Spanish frontier.

German police at the Hendaye bridge maintained that the evacuation was a "purely temporary withdrawal," necessitated by the reassignment of border region forces following the shift of certain SS (Elite guards) units of the frontier garrison toward the Loire river

Frenchmen living on the Spanish side of the frontier said however, they are convinced the Nazi high command is abandoning southwestern France, and many believe they will awake some morning soon and find the last German gone.

Hungarian Ministers Reported Dismissed

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 8—The Berlin radio quoted a dispatch from Budapest today as saying that Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungarian regent, had dismissed Bela Imredi, minister without portfolio, and two other cabinet members "at their own request"

The others dismissed were identified as Antal Kunder, minister of commerce and transportation, and Andor Jaross, home secretary.

The significance of the development was not immediately apparent. All three, however, were strongly identified with pro-Nazi elements in Hungary and took office last March 23 when a new government was organized under Premier Doemez Sztojay to intensify the war effort.

Formation of the Sztojay cabinet coincided with a sudden influx of German troops which amounted to virtual military occupation of Hungary.

WLB ISSUES UNION ORDER IN AP OFFICE

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug 8—Maintenance of union membership by news employees of the New York office of The Associated Press was ordered in a directive of the newspaper commission of the war labor board received today by The Associated Press and the American Newspaper Guild

The AP, which had opposed the union maintenance provision for newsmen, announced it would appeal

A similar order was recently issued in a case involving the Indianapolis Guild contract with the United Press Associations

The maintenance of membership clause provides that New York AP news employes who are members of the guild in good standing on August 20 will be required as a condition of employment to maintain their good standing in the union for the duration of the contract This takes into account the usual 15-day "escape period" during which the commission specified, guild members have the right to withdraw from membership, if they so desire, and non-members may remain non-members or may join or reaffiliate.

The commission ordered increases in contract minima for newsmen, photographers and artists

All salary increases were ordered retroactive to September 1, 1943, and the new contract was ordered to remain in effect until December 31, 1944

Cubs Drop 10 to 6 Game To Springfield, But Hold Edge for Series

Giants Bounce Back To Edge Marion at Lincoln Park.

By BOB COCHERL

The Springfield Giants bounced back after losing two games Sunday to Marion to take last night's game by the score of 10 to 6 at Lincoln park before a crowd of 543 paid admissions.

It was a ragged ball game with the Giants making 5 miscues to 3 for the locals. Dick Pace started for Marion, in his next to last start, and was relieved by Gene Mills in the fifth inning. Dick has a date with Uncle Sam for Aug. 16, and will be sworn in at that time.

Friday, has been set aside as Pace Day in honor of Dick, who hails from Cardington.

The locals wasted little time in finding the slants of Frank Lisztwan as Bill Morneweg led off with a single to left field, was sent to third on a single by John Smith and scampered home on Al Jeske's fly to right field. Vickery then popped to short. Smith stole second and scored when Mendizabal was safe on the second baseman's error. Bellamy popped to short ending the inning.

Skip Wilgamot's Giants came back to score one in the third when with one out Simpson singled to right and came home on a triple by Popps. They didn't stop here, however, as in the next inning they tallied four more on a single by Gutt, a walk by Bolick, a single to left by Daues, a single to center by Walker, and a single to center by Simpson. Then in the fifth they tallied one on a triple to right field by Bob Decker who raced home when Carenbauer was out second to first. In the eighth Jerry Gutt singled to left, and came home when Bill Morneweg hobbled Bolick's single to center. Bolick went to second on the error, Daues was safe on an error by Jeske at short and then Mel Walker, who had a single in two trips to the plate, parked one over the left field wall scoring Bolick from third and Daues from first for their final tallies.

The Cubs, who hate to say die, scored three in the eighth when Jeske was safe on the shortstop's error and went to third on a single by Vickery. Mendizabal then walked, filling the bases. The next two batters flied out and Bob Kuhlman hit his second double of the game scoring Jeske, Vickery and Mendizabal. In the ninth they chased Popps from the hill when the first two men got on by the way of a single and a hit batter. Then Vickery started Goodwin off with a single to left to send Smith home with the last marker as Mendizabal fanned and Bellamy lined to second doubling Vickery. Tex took second on a double steal.

Tonight the locals meet the Giants in a doubleheader starting at 7 P. M. Bob Kuhlman, Cub speedball artist, will be after his third win in six starts with Ed. Oley seeking win number four.

Red Birds Facing Danger of Tumble Into 2nd Division

By The Associated Press

The Columbus Red Birds, once the main worry of the pace-setting Milwaukee Brewers in the American Association race, now are in danger of tumbling out of the first division.

The fluttering Birds actually dropped into fifth place for a few hours last night when the hard-pressed St. Paul Saints whipped them 4-3 in the opener of a double-header. However, Columbus wrested fourth place back from the Saints with a 6-2 decision in the nightcap.

Meanwhile, the scrap for second spot waxed even hotter as third-place Toledo spanked Minneapolis, 8-1, to climb within a single percentage point of the idle Louisville Colonels. In the evening's only other contest, the Brewers licked Indianapolis, 10-3, to snap the Tribe's five-game winning streak.

Red Marion's two-run homer sparked a four-run rally in the fourth inning which gave St. Paul its opening win over Columbus. In the finale, the Red Birds unleashed a 15-hit attack to provide Ken Burkhart with his 11th triumph of the season. The Columbus assault included a pair of doubles by outfielder Johnny Wyrostek, the league's leading hitter, who rejoined the Red Birds when his scheduled induction into the Navy was delayed.

Charley Sproull of Milwaukee had little trouble annexing his 14th victory as the Tribe committed six errors and the Brewers touched Carl Lindquist for nine hits, including a triple and two singles by Hal Peck.

Toledo polished off the Millers with a 12-hit barrage, seven of them extra-base clouts. Babe Martin, poling a home run, a double and a single, and Len Schulte, who smashed a triple and two doubles, paced the Mud Hen attack. It was the 13th setback without a victory for starter Bill Sahlin of the Millers.

Snatches of Sports

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—The Giants drew 15,299 fans (13,847 paid) for their Sunday doubleheader with the Phillies. Esquire's All American boys' game yesterday attracted 17,903 and a lot of people who paid for tickets didn't go. . . . With due allowances for the effects of promotion, that indicates a healthy interest in the old-fashioned American game of baseball-for-fun. . . . It was a good show and this dept. hereby votes against the suggestion that future games be staged as preliminaries to the major league All Star fiestas. The kids showed they could stand on their own feet.

Short Short Story

In one respect, Messrs. Mack and Ott did a perfect job of managing; They got all 28 players into the game. . . . But when one pinch hitter took three strikes, a scribe from his home town moaned: "That's my story for today."

Scrap Collection

Overlooked fact about the major league All-Star game last month was that Rip Sewell was only the second pitcher in the 12-year history of the game to work a three-inning stint without giving a hit. The first was Ol' Diz Dean in 1936 . . . What's this story that actor Don Ameche, who is miffed because the National Football league tabled his franchise application, has been joining with Christy Walsh, John Keeshin of Chicago, Tony Morabito of San Francisco and Buffalo's Sam Cordovano in secret meetings concerning a new league? . . . Welterweight Artie Dorrell was washed out as an Army pilot 12 days before he would have received his wings because of (would you believe it) lack of co-ordination.

Purely Personal Postscript

In spite of pinch-hitter Fritz Howell's ballyhoo, the fish weren't biting in New Hampshire, where this columnist recently vacationed. . . . Also, there was no one to split the firewood or mow the perpendicular meadow, so don't ask how we enjoyed it.

Michigan Star Favorite in Women's Golf Play

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 8—Little Sally Sessions of Muskegon, former Michigan state tennis champion who turned to golf four years ago, had a big burden to carry today—the ranking of a favorite in the women's western amateur championship race.

The 5-foot, 2-inch mite demonstrated a complete mastery over the tough Owentsia course yesterday by shooting a one-under-par 74 to establish a women's course record and equal the all-time low qualifying round in 44 years of the tournament.

Other outstanding first round matches send Georgia Tainter, Fargo, N. D., (84) against Dorothy Ellis, Indianapolis, (88); Dorothy Germain, Philadelphia, the defending champion, (81) against Miss Carol Clark, Cincinnati, O., (87) and Peggy Kirk, Findlay, O., (82) against Polly Riley, Fort Worth, Tex., (86).

Boston Manager Picks Cubs To Finish Second in National

By The Associated Press

Evansville Bob Coleman, manager of the Boston Braves today picked the Chicago Cubs to win the second-place scrap in the National league and labeled the Bruins' Bill Nicholson the most valuable player in the circuit.

As the National's eastern teams headed west for their last long jaunt of the season and the St. Louis Browns led the American's western clubs on a final eastern invasion, Coleman left little doubt about his concession of the flag to the St. Louis Cardinals whom he called the "only real ball club" in the majors.

With the exception of the New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates who are playing off a postponed game in Pittsburgh, all big league clubs enjoyed a second successive open date.

With the Cards enjoying a 16½ game lead and only 55 to go, National league managers couldn't be blamed for following Coleman's train of thought and talking about the second place scrap.

The portly catcher from back home in Indiana who is completing his first season as a league manager doesn't hit the cage for another week. The thoughts of Nicholson trouble his sleep.

"When the Cubs were stumbling around the basement, Nicholson was flitting around and the Boston skipper pointed out: 'He didn't hit a homer until May, like last year, but then he started those Cubs have been plenty rough.'

"Marty Marion of the Cards is a close second to Nicholson as most valuable but I think Marty does more for the Cubs than Marion can do for St. Louis. That Marion, though, is an octopus at shortstop. With help like that no wonder Billy Southworth's pitching looks good. Johnny Hopp is having a great year and Ray Sanders . . . and Kurowski . . . and. Let's talk about something else."

Joe Baksi Defeats Lee Savold in Chicago

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 8—Without causing champion Joe Louis any particular "G. I." unrest, youthful Joe Baski last night methodically pummeled Lee Savold off the wartime heavyweight top row in a 10-round scrap witnessed by a small crowd of 16,135 at Wrigley Field.

The 22-year-old ex-coal miner from Kulpmont, Pa., bull-shouldered his way to a second decision over the battling Merchant Marine in three meetings this year.

Baski, outweighing his foe 213¾ to 199 pounds, lured Savold into constant in-fighting which touched off frequent boos, but won the ranking civilian heavyweight the nod of referee Walter Brightmore and one of the two judges. The other judge voted for a draw.

DODGER TRYOUTS SET AT ZANESVILLE

ZANESVILLE, O., Aug. 8—A tryout camp offering young athletes an opportunity to play baseball professionally will be conducted at Municipal Stadium here by the Brooklyn Dodger organization from Monday, Aug. 21 through Thursday, Aug. 24.

The tryouts were announced today by Branch Rickey, Jr., director of minor league clubs for the Dodgers, and George Archer, business manager of the Zanesville club of the Ohio State League, a Brooklyn affiliate.

Boys 16 or older who are not competing in American Legion baseball are invited to report to Municipal Stadium for trials, Rickey said. To receive tryouts boys need only present themselves at the field Monday, August 21, at 9 a. m., bringing their shoes, gloves and uniforms. No fee is charged. However, out-of-town boys must finance their trips to Zanesville and living expenses while here.

Boys who are offered and sign contracts with clubs in the Brooklyn organization on the strength of their showings in camps will be refunded any expenses incurred in attending.

DETROIT PREDICTS NEW AUTO COMBINE

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, Aug. 8—Unusual activity in low-priced motor company shares in the stock markets and reports current in automobile circles here for several days that mergers of some of the smaller automobile manufacturing companies may be effected to form another huge corporation to compete with the car industry's "Big Three" of General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

The merger reports were given added impetus last week by the withdrawal of the four Fisher brothers—William A., Lawrence P., Charles T. and Edward F. Fisher—from General Motors Corporation and their statement that they planned to get back into the industry in a big way."

The brothers did not disclose their immediate plans but rumors circulated quickly that they would be among figures in creating a new low-priced motorcar corporation.

Meanwhile it became definitely known that a large post war expansion of Graham-Paige Motors Corp. is contemplated. The plans now all but completed, call for a heavy investment in Graham-Paige by Floyd Odlum, of Atlas Corporation, the appointment of Joseph W. Frazer, former president of Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., as board chairman, and the taking over of Frazer's Warren City Manufacturing Co., of Warren, Ohio as an operating subsidiary of Graham-Paige. Official announcement of the Graham-Paige program is understood to be planned for some day this week.

Wants Married Women Returned to Kitchens

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—While considering postwar employment problems, says Senator Andrews (D-Fla), congress should act "to sending working mothers and wives back to their kitchens" when peace comes.

Such action, he asserted today, "would be a major step toward insuring necessary jobs for the millions of returning war veterans and male defense workers who will be seeking new positions."

The Floridian said government-sponsored "education and persuasion" might lead working women homeward, but he believed a law giving veterans, other men and single girls preference on jobs "probably would be more practical."

The land area of all the West Indies islands is about 100,000 square miles.

The contract was awarded on a bid of $8,021 which will include application of an asphalt emulsion to streets which will be spread with chipped stone. Three-tenths of a gallon of the emulsion and 25 pounds of stone will be applied to each square yard of street to be repaired.

Clerk Ordered To Act on Ballot Applications

CIO Committee Brings Suit in Mahoning County.

By The Associated Press

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 8—The clerk of the Mahoning county board of elections has been ordered to act on approximately 1,600 requests for soldier ballot applications gathered from relatives of service men and women by the CIO-Political Action committee.

In a ruling handed down yesterday, Common Pleas Judge David G. Jenkins ordered election officials to issue applications for soldier ballots on the basis of these requests. Chester Crosby, Youngstown CIO-PAC chairman, reported the committee went to County Prosecutor William A. Ambrose who filed the mandamus action when the board declined to act on the requests.

E. G. Schuessler, first assistant state attorney general, told the court his office opposed the suit on technical grounds only. He explained the attorney general's office believed the clerk could issue the applications on the requests, but that the suit should have named the clerk as defendant instead of the board, and the prosecutor should have acted directly for the relatives instead of for the committee which was in no way related to service people for whom applications were asked.

said. "The best news came Sunday when we heard that Himmler had been killed and that Goering was wounded in the attack on Himmler."

The British first heard the story of the alleged assassination from the Austrians. I asked a German intelligence officer, who had been kept apart from the Austrians:

"I suppose Himmler is stronger than Hitler these days?"

"No Himmler is dead," the Nazi intelligence officer asserted, "he was assassinated. I heard it at my headquarters Sunday. All our officers are talking about it."

GERMANS CLING TO ARNO RIVER AREA

By The Associated Press

ROME, Aug. 8—The Germans clung tightly to a foothold in the hills south of the Arno river in the great bend east of Florence today after counterattacking sharply against Indian troops advancing through the mountains north of Arezzo.

In the two great cities bisected by the Arno—Florence and Pisa—the positions of the contending forces remained virtually unchanged, the Allies holding the regions south of the stream and the Germans still in control of the north banks.

Stormy weather, much with rain, curtailed action along most of the front. On both sides of Florence Gen. Sir Harold Alexander sent Eighth army patrols across the Arno, but there was no sign of an attempt to gain a foothold over the stream.

FRANCE

units of the U. S. offensive to the south—hitting eastward from Mayenne and Laval—had entered Le Mans, communications network forming a key to Paris.

The Canadian First army on the allied left flank burst forward at midnight after a bomb-barrage by 1,000 RAF heavy bombers, and broke the first main enemy defense line south of Caen, advancing up to four miles.

Novel tactics marked the assault. The bombers flew in close ground support for the first time in darkness, and Canadian artillery tracer shells spotted the targets for them just ahead of the allied line. The allied planes hurled down 6,700 tons of explosives and then Canadian armor rolled forward in the fire-licked blackness—the first major night attack by tanks in France. Infantrymen followed, digging out the Germans.

Drive on Falaise

The Canadian push was pointed in the direction of the road hub city of Falaise, 20 miles northeast of Caen.

The Canadian First army, which also includes some British units, swept through the blasted strongpoints of May-Sur-Orne and St. Martin-De-Fontenay east of the Orne river which the Germans have defended fanatically for weeks.

A furious battle was reported raging around bitterly contested Tilly-La-Campagne, five miles below Caen. The town long since has been demolished but remains a valuable artillery position.

The American clean up of the Breton peninsula continued. Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's tank-infantry's tank-infantry teams were within five miles of the big southern naval and submarine base of Lorient. There was no further information about a reported offer of the German garrison there to surrender.

Other U. S. forces were fighting within four miles of the second French port of Brest and its mile of deep-water quays. At the week-end, American troops had been inside the city of 70,000.

The northern St. Malo Cape was cut. Remnants of the German garrison were making a final fight behind medieval fortifications and modern minefields.

Nazis Destroy Supplies

Smoke from large fires rose from St. Malo and Lorient, indicating the Germans were destroying supplies and preparing to pull out. Guingamp and St. Brieuc, between St. Malo and Brest, were added to the long list of Liberated Brittany towns.

The menacing giant pincer thrusts toward Paris, the keystone of the Nazis' shaky western conquests, was being carried out on the 26th anniversary of the Germans' "blackest day" of the first World war.

In further grim underscoring of this anniversary came mounting reports of dissension in the German ranks and new threats from the uprising French.

Marion Soldier Shares in Citation Award

Word from Staff Sgt. Walter D. Poorman, stationed in England, to his parents here recently stated that he, with other members of his group, received presidential citation awards July 15. He told his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Poorman of 311 East Fairground street that he could not disclose the action which merited the citation. He is a member of a troop carrier squadron of the Army Air force. The award he described as a blue ribbon with gold border. In service three years, he was sent overseas two years ago and served in Africa and Sicily before being stationed in England.

Tech. Sgt. Gillespie Awarded Air Medal

Tech. Sgt. Carl Gillespie, radio operator and gunner on a Liberator bomber stationed in England, has been awarded the Air medal and two oak leaf clusters, according to word received by a brother, Royal Gillespie of 642 North State street. A former resident of Prospect, he was an employe of the Erie railroad before entering service a year and a half ago. He has been overseas four months, and it is believed that he took part in the recent invasion of France for which service he was awarded the medal.

Fire Is Extinguished in Mine at Adena, O.

By The Associated Press

BELLAIRE, O., Aug. 8—A mine fire which broke out in the Norton mine at nearby Adena last night, momentarily threatening approximately 74 miners, was extinguished today, mine officials reported.

The fire was put out by mine rescue crews from the Powhatan, Blaine, Dorothy and Barton mines and the Adena fire department. Cause of the fire, which broke out near the mine entrance close to a ventilating fan, has not been determined, Joe Chadwick, assistant superintendent of mine rescue work for the Ohio division of mines, said.

HITLER

Count Yorck Von Wartenburg.

Stieff, first to be questioned, answered a simple "yes" when asked if he had been involved in assassination plans as early as the summer of 1943.

His answers also told of an alternate plan. Three veteran soldiers from the front were to be sent to demonstrate new field equipment for Hitler. Explosives hidden in the baggage of one of the soldiers were to be timed to kill everyone in the group.

A Great Love Story

BOTH PARTIES PICK CANDIDATES IN N. Y.

By The Associated Press

Democrats and Republicans in New York, with their thoughts on the state's 47 electoral votes, choose senatorial "running mates" today for their parties' presidential nominees.

Voters in Arkansas, Connecticut and Vermont likewise are busy at candidate-picking for the elections to be held three months from now.

Governor Thomas E. Dewey conferred with party leaders on who would be the best senate candidate to help him swing the state in his presidential try. Advance indications pointed to Thomas J. Curran of Manhattan, 33-year-old secretary of state, as the choice.

New York Democrats gathered for their meeting with the expectation their nominee again would be Senator Robert F. Wagner, 67-year-old author of the social security and national labor relations act. He is a longtime supporter of President Roosevelt.

Intrigue in the other three states politicking today:

Arkansas—Rep. J. W. Fulbright, freshman congressman, against Governor Homer M. Adkins in a runoff primary for the Democratic nomination for the senate seat held by Mrs. Hattie Caraway, who was defeated in the first primary.

Connecticut—Senator John A. Danaher, representative-at-large Roleslaus J. Monktewitz and Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin due to be renominated in the Republican state convention.

Vermont—Lt. Gov. Mortimer E. Proctor and Arthur W. Simpson running for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, the winner to oppose Dr. Ernest H. Bailey, Democrat.

AIR RAIDS

allied airmen dealt hard blows to German armor, transport and supply, were:

1. British rocket-firing Typhoons and fighter-bombers teamed with American fighter-bombers and knocked out at least 163 tanks in repeated blows against a counterattack on the American Avranches corridor.

2. American heavy bombers, fighters and fighter-bombers ranged over France from end to end, smashing German transport routes, supply centers.

In the Avranches sector, the British second tactical air force destroyed 81 tanks and damaged 54. The U. S. Ninth air force destroyed 26 and damaged a large number.

All operations over France yesterday and last night totaled more than 4,000 offensive sorties.

By The Associated Press

ROME, Aug. 8—A number of grounded German planes were left in flames during the night when RAF bombers attacked Szombathely airdrome south of Vienna a few hours after American heavy bombers raided two synthetic oil plants at Blechhamer in German Silesia.

Twenty-nine Nazi planes were shot down by escorting fighters and bomber gunners in the Blechhamer attack. The allies lost 22 planes from a total of 3,000 operating yesterday.

Great columns of smoke rising 15,000 feet testified to the damage done to the oil plants at Blechhamer.

Penetrating deeply into the Rhone valley American Mitchells bombed rail bridges in that southeastern France sector for the fifth time in six days. Marauders also hammered communications in southern France and along the Riviera.

can divisions advance toward Paris. War correspondents, radio observers and commentators and the soldiers themselves are full of praise for the place that plasma has filled in taking care of war's all too numerous casualties.

In Charge of Registrations

Miss Guthery is being assisted by the following women who are taking registrations for the various days and who will be in charge of registrations on these days next week: Monday, Mrs. J. C. Porter; Tuesday, Mrs. M. C. Murphy; Wednesday, Mrs. J. Wendell Wiant; Thursday, Miss Mary Jo Stafford; Friday, Miss Ruth Turner.

According to the committee's records donors are more urgently needed for Monday, the unit's first day here. The committee realizes that many persons are out of the city and also that this is a busy season for housewives, but there also is urgent need for blood plasma if the wounded on the battlefields of the world and those pouring into their homeland by plane and boat from the war-torn areas are to be given the care they so richly earned and deserve.

Volunteer donors may register by phoning the Red Cross office, 2439 or by calling at the office at 133 West Center street.

Hours for the five days the blood unit will be here are, Aug. 14 and 16, 12:30 to 4:45 p. m.; Aug. 16, 12 noon to 4:15 p. m.; Aug. 17, 12:30 to 4:45 p. m.; Aug. 18, 9 a. m. to 1:15 p. m.

FAVOR LOWER PRICED ISSUES

Motors and Equipment Stocks Hold Spotlight in Bullish Trading Session.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—Low-priced performers, principally motor and equipment stocks, continued to hold the bullish spotlight in today's market.

Optimistic peace-time predictions for the independent automotive group, together with talk of mergers and other plans for widescale production, remained as a spur for favorites. A possible sudden collapse of the Nazis, however, still accentuated investment caution on the ground that the home front may be unprepared for quick industrial transition.

Gains of fractions to a point or so predominated after a spotty opening but dealings, near the fourth hour, were under those of the preceding session.

Martin-Parry, Hupp Motors and Aviation Corp. were among the liveliest movers at 1944 peaks. Ahead at intervals were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors and U. S. Rubber.

Rails were not particularly depressed by word the government contemplated proceeding against some carriers on anti-monopolistic charges although the general run of transportation stocks failed to get far out in front.

On the side of the metal division was the step of WPB in revising restrictions for the use of iron and steel in certain products. The board warned, though, that the changes would not boost the total amount of steel available for such purposes.

CORN-HOG PRICES NOW IN BALANCE

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 — A balanced corn-hog price ratio has been restored, with corn at ceiling prices and hogs fluctuating between the support and ceiling prices, James C. Rogers, Jr., acting price administrator, said in a letter made public today by Senator Capper (R-Kan.)

Rogers' letter replied to a recent protest by 15 senators that the office of price administration (OPA) war food administration (WFA) and the agriculture department had so handled corn prices that the corn-hog relationship became seriously unbalanced.

"I want to say at this point also that another result of these unwise policies is now threatened," Capper said in a statement prepared for the congressional record. "Last winter, with huge pork surpluses, the OPA delayed taking pork off the ration list until hot weather approached. Hogs flooded the markets; hog raisers took heavy losses. Now the WFA itself, I understand, is worrying for fear there will be a shortage of pork next year."

"During the past fall, we were again asked to raise the price of corn," Rogers wrote Capper. "In our judgment such an increase at that time would have been disastrous in that it would have forced such heavy marketings of hogs that the already crowded packing houses could not have absorbed the supply.

"There would have been a far worse situation in the corn belt and in the packing industry than occurred during the winter. Furthermore, nothing could have been gained since the farmers knew, as is evidenced by their hog production plans and performance, that an approximate balance had been restored between hog prices and corn prices."

RUSSIA

as 20 miles yesterday in this new surge toward the sea.

To the south the capture of 40 communities, including Andrussial, put other red army troops 53 miles east-northeast of Tilsit.

With the Red army fighting virtually on the East Prussian border, hundreds of Stormoviks, Bostons and Soviet medium bombers went into attacks against East Prussian towns, railroads and highways today.

Izvestia commented that "the hour of revenge has come."

One powerful arm of Gen. Chernyakhovsky's army group moving against East Prussia before stiffening opposition, was striking north of the East Prussian border toward the Baltic on a 30 to 35-mile front in Lithuania. Another arm northwest of Bialystok, in old Poland, approached the Biebrza river. This group is well within the Suvalki triangle which East Prussia annexed in 1939 and within about five miles of the city of Suwalki.

Official sources were silent about the siege of Warsaw, in its ninth day, but it is known that Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky is building up reserves. When he reached the gates of the Polish capital, the Germans hurled a violent attack from the northwest at his flank. The marshal, while contending with this counterattack, which is now believed shattered, has begun storming the Warsaw suburbs.

Networks To Vie For Sunday Night Listeners

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—There are signs that a network fight for listener attention on Sunday evenings is in prospect for the fall and winter. CBS is realigning its schedule in the hours in which other top rating programs have had things somewhat their own way.

Starting in at 6 and continuing for two and a half hours, CBS indicates it intends to go after the audiences credited to such NBC comedy shows as those of Jack Benny, Gildersleeve and Edgar Bergen's Charlie McCarthy.

For instance, opposite Benny at 7 there will be Kate Smith and her variety hour, moved from Friday nights, while Fannie Brice, transferred from NBC, will vie with Gildersleeve at 8:30. The McCarthy competition at 8 is to come from Blondie and Dagwood, who on Aug. 13 begin broadcasting Sunday nights on CBS in addition to Friday evenings on the Blu.

down and an American cruiser damaged.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz previously announced that 11 Japanese vessels were sunk and 30 other surface craft damaged, and 13 enemy planes were destroyed, for the loss of 16 American planes, last Thursday and Friday.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported a 30-ton mid-day bombing raid Sunday upon Yap, 800 miles east of Mindanao, and added:

"There was no attempt at interception. The enemy's air base appears to have been neutralized by our continuous attacks."

MacArthur also announced that an American counter-envelopment force east of Aitape had inflicted heavy casualties upon trapped Japanese units, severed the enemy supply line from Wewak, and was advancing westward on Alus village.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

MY father and "Mr. K.", the FBI man, may have been able to "relax" until Stebbins should return, but I found myself tense as the proverbial "fiddle string," knowing that the eyes of the Nazi spy were watching my every move.

I was sure that my father's knowledge, and the cool resourcefulness of the FBI men, would insure our departure without the man's guessing our destination. But even that confidence could not cure my "jitters," and my mental barometer rose high when Stebbins came back. Anything was better than inaction.

Reports

"I'm sure nobody trailed me, sir," he said, when he had come close to my father. "And Miller is parked across from the Eighth avenue entrance a little bit to the south."

"That's fine," my father commended. "I see you came in from the opposite direction."

"Yes. No use tipping anything off to him," Stebbins said, inclining his head ever so slightly in the direction of the spy.

"And there's no use in our waiting any longer," my father said briskly. "Will you please take us out of here the way you think safest?"

"Just one second, sir," "Mr. K." said. "Start away, of course, in the opposite direction to the door, and get out of sight as soon as possible. But, after that, I am sure you can make a bee line for your car. I'll guarantee to take care of the lad watching us."

Agrees

"I'm sure you will," my father said.

"Then," "Mr. K." went on deferentially, "there's nothing to keep you, now, Chief. Good luck! I shall be down at the hideaway soon after you get there, I am sure."

"I shall be glad to see you," my father said cordially. "Come, Margaret!"

He put his hand beneath my elbow, Stebbins said, "This way," and we started in the direction from which the man just had come to us.

Then, out of the corner of my eye, I saw "Mr. K." move swiftly so that he stood between the man and us, and heard him say softly, but so that we caught the words: "Just where did you think you were going, Brother?"

Astonished

I think the man was too astonished to answer him at first. His conceit had led him to believe that no one had spotted him. And before he found words, we were out of earshot, for Stebbins, with a backward glance at us, had accelerated his pace.

"Hurry! Let's get out of sight!" he adjured us. "That bird will be tied up for the present duration.

"We won't need to go through any rabbit warrens now," he said. "We'll just cut around this corner to the other corridor and back track until we get to the Eighth Avenue entrance. It's out of sight of that place where 'Mr. K.' is singing lullabies to the baby."

There was something about his jaunty reassurance that ironed out my wrinkled nerves, and I found myself breathing freely again as he led us quickly but surely around and along corridors until we came out on the open space leading to the stairs before the Eighth Avenue entrance.

No Difficulty

We made the car with no difficulty, no opposition, no sign of any hostile watching eyes. But my father was taking no chances. He spoke to Miller, the driver.

"Miller, you know the right hotels?" he asked crisply.

"Yes, sir."

"Then drive to this entrance"—and he named a different entrance than the one at which he had ordered the armored car with Gus and Joe to be stationed—"by as devious a way as possible. Be sure you're not trailed. We shall get out there, and you are to wait near the entrance for ten minutes. If we do not come out by the end of that time, drive back to the hideaway. You understand?"

"Yes sir," Miller said respectfully, but I guessed that he, too, was irritated a bit by my father's question. There was nothing, however, that I could do about it, and I settled back into my seat with relief, as my father said, with satisfaction in his voice: "I imagine we'll have no more trouble in getting back to the hideaway."

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The Versatile Soy

THE WAR has certainly stimulated our thoughts and imaginations into channels of speculation about the minimum of foods we can get along on in case of invasion or siege or famine. In Germany, we are told, they have twice during the conflict been badly pinched by the failure of the potato crop. This has raised our respect for the potato, because it suggests that it is adequate as a single food fulfilling all nutritional requirements.

In our own land of plenty we have for two years had to endure a considerable curtailment of our meat supply. It gave those who were convinced that meat is "bad for you" a practical chance to try out their theories, but for most of us the lack of juick steaks and roast beef in abundance has made us long for that most glorious, adequate and complete of all articles of diet.

What can be substituted for meat if some dire calamity were to happen?

What foods that grow abundantly and easily in our climate are adequate for full nutritional needs, supposing this glorious land of bounty should walk into a period of meteorological and agricultural calamities?

Well, it's not likely to happen, but our war experiences give considerable courage in the knowledge that we can get along on a good deal less than we were accustomed to have.

One answer of contemporary industry is the soy bean. It fulfills the requirements of adaptability and easy cultivation. A small plat of ground located nearby anywhere in North America will grow say beans in adequate amounts for a family's nutrition. I have even heard of tenement and flat dwellers who have grown enough soy beans in pots on their window sills to supplement their meat rations, but I do not guarantee this information.

Nutritionally the soy bean has very high adequacy. It is high in proteins. The claim has been made that it is a complete protein. That claim is regarded with some skepticism by Colonel Isker, of the Subsistence Research Division, United States Army, but it is certain that the soy bean contains most of the essential amino acids of a complete protein and can be substituted for meat, on those grounds, for long periods of time.

Besides that it contains fats and starches and has a high caloric value. And in the departments of vitamins and minerals it has these to offer:

Vitamins: a. Carotene. b. Thiamine (Vitamin B). c. Riboflavin. d. Niacin. e. Pantothenic acid. f. Biotin. g. Inositol. h. Cheline. (These are the chemical names of the alphabetical vitmins.)

Minerals: a. Calcum. b. Phosphorous. c. Sodium. d. Potassium. e. Magnesium. f. Sulphur. g. Chlorine. h. Iron. i. Silicon. j. Copper. k. Manganese. l. Zinc.

The army has used soy bean flour in making the K biscuits, the principal function underlying the use of which is to provide as complete a non-meat protein as possible.

The soy products are rapidly absorbed, in which they have the advantage over nuts, the other suggested substitute for meat protein.

In edibility the manufacturers have greatly improved on the earlier product. Soy flour is no longer the sticky, beany tasting mess of earlier days, but very palatable. You can get recipes for nearly everything from soy bread to meat loaf, goulash or lemon meringue pie made out of soy products.
